Sounds like good advise. But I really don't want to spend a ton of money on equipment just to find out theirs nobody to chat with. Trying to get some people I know into it put they don't seem to be interested. They are happy with their cell phones.

What you say does make sense. I just assumed with a shorted or broken wire in the antenna the swr would be high also. I will admit I was trying to jerry rig the antenna with electric fence wire I had laying around to get the swr down. That I did but the red light started coming on. I thought as long as your swr are low then your radio is safe to transmit.

The LED lights off of a voltage. The higher the voltage the brighter the LED.

I assume that the LED is lighting with a good SWR because your radio is putting out more power than a stock Galaxy. The radios LED circuit was designed with a specific power level in mind. That built in calibration has been defeated. The LED has no choice but to light up because the increase in power also increases the voltage present at the LED.

Two condition make the LED voltage greater and they are NOT DIRECTLT RELATED TO SWR. Higher power levels and an increase in antenna impedance.

In your opinion would it still be safe to operate the radio with the greater voltage issue and low swr? My better judgment is telling me to get a new antenna and leave the radio off until then, or just use my mobile Wilson 2000 on the bake oven door. That is the only way I get good SWRs and no warning light. but limited range and family members tripping over the cable and complaining. It seems like I am between a rock and a hard place unless I decide to spend a little green or spend my time sitting in the truck. :(

Changing in VR5 (some related to modulation) remove the noise ,
i put vr5 more near ground.

Noise seems generated from somewhere feedback at hight swr.... regulation of vr5 remove noise but what kind of effect can it have on modulation (in am all semms right RF evelope in the scope and audio received from another cb)?

RF feedback into the microphone? If you feel it is due to high SWR - why not check and reduce it? Try your tests again. What kind of mic are you using? If you mentioned it, I didn't see it. I've seen D104s do that. On 2 meters - I've seen RF get into the power source and do all kinds of weird things to the signal.

Check your SWR then - go from there. IF it IS high, even if the mic/audio issue isn't cured, at least another problem will be - and save you from yet a future one.

Are you using an "Amplifier" with this set up?

I "believe" you said you're running the radio off a car battery. Is it "Actually" mobile or in the house? If in the house, are you running a trickle charger in the process? IF the modulation was cranked up all the way, were you running anything in the background maybe the mic picked up?
Many items can cause a hum - you won't hear - that the mic will pick up. If it is mobile, any chance something in the vehicle is causing it? With the modulation cranked up - maybe it was enough to allow "that" to be heard.

I've also seen a transmitter make some weird sounds on key - up - with a weaker battery. The antenna SWR as you alluded to - the antenna not grounded - could also create issues along those limes. I've seen lots of weird things happen to cause noises such as you describe - not always internal. Recheck your Antenna coax connections too.

If the calibrated SWR meter says it's OK then it's OK to use even with the antenna light on.

Actually I prefer a dual directional coupler, a coax switch and a spectrum analyzer. Not only do I see SWR conditions, I also get to see the spectral purity of the transmitted signal.

Easy to tune antennae, just tune for the least reflected signal from the directional coupler. You can build a very nice directional coupler for under $30 that will work well up to about 200MHz.

I was listening to a couple of OM's on 3.950 tonight and one stated that "The amp (AL-80B) was always operating with his EVERY transmission" even though both stations were in the same town, and both of their signals were 59. Isn't this a violation of the Part 97 Rulebook? I believe it states that hams must use the LEAST amount of power to carry out the desired communication. If I were you, I'd keep my ear on that frequency (3950) because it has a LONG history of illegal ops on it. I dunno...maybe tell Riley?

You're backpedaling.

What you clearly said was that it could not be detected without a scope.
Then you come up with a bunch of gobbledeegook about 'well designed receivers'. That's not the point, and that's not what you said.

Suffice to say that you were simply wrong. 100 Hz is clearly audible.
It doesn't take a scope to detect. A pair of common ears is all that's necessary. Whether it should be heard in a CB receiver is debatable, but if it's there, there's no reason why one shouldn't be able to hear it.

To be fair, "subaudible tone" is a fairly common euphemism for CTCSS or "PL" tones. As you point out, though, they're only "subaudible" because they get filtered out before the final audio stages.

well,
a cheap alternative would be to have another operator stop by (or you meet them) and see of they have a memter you can borrow to test with (or even purchase, they can be had cheap). Otherwise, if the SWR bridge in the radio is working ok, even if the light lights up, I wouldn't get too concerned (assuming the SWR bridge is ok). Telstar-electronics suggested testing on a dummy load. thats not a bad idea. even plug the dummy load into the far end of the coax (if a problem with the coax exists, this will reveal it).

in any case, assuming the radio is working properly, the antenna is most likely the culprit and will need replacing.

yep. I've had a couple of those. even built a few for blind people (I being one of them). its pretty easy to have the voltage read as a pitch (forward right ear, reflected left ear). I got pretty handy with those.

I can also tune an antenna with a white noise bridge and an antenna tuner. no white noise means low SWR (and then use the aforementioned audio directional coupler to clean up the stray readings).

VARIOUS ARTISTS "Seedmouth" CD
(1996, Cold Spring # CSR12)

Dark ambient always had quite a strict definition, which was enough for many bands and solo-projects of musicians worldwide. Minimalistic and free from pronounced details or emotional outbursts, it carries a lot of the hypnotic effects, created due to monotonous sonority and looped fragments. UK based Cold Spring label, known for its abundant experience in popularization of various underground curiosities, has expanded the limits of dark ambient realms. That means, in 1996 they released new compilation of "international atmospherics", which is going beyond the imaging course, but on the more profound level. So you can't figure out some common principles of composition or sonic juxtaposition, but in perceptional scale these pieces all are similar to the idea of classic ambient soundscapes: slow submergence, subconscious contemplation, lots of mystic and ritualistic signs. All of these tracks were recorded exclusively for this project, and many of these artists were just the promising newcomers. As far as the times passed, many of them became the most celebrated artists in the whole universe of the dark scene: Lustmord, Cranioclast, Deutsch Nepal, Inanna, John Watermann, Illusion Of Safety, Band Of Pain and Inade. Even the couple of tracks by less known bands like Experimental Audio Research and Jawbone are just the masterpieces according to all the highest standards of quality ever possible for underground music.
The special feature of this CD is the best track ever composed by russian artist Mikhail Atom, bombastic and lyrical at the same time.

This compilation was released in a limited edition of 1500 copies
but sold out and out of print for many years, now becoming the collector's item.

That is why racial pride is so important, you can ignore silly remarks about your race instead of feeling guilty for being your race. This says more about the "offended" than the supposed "offender."

Probably only "Al not to sharp sharpton" is offended though ... but then, he has reason to be offended. Only, in his case, change "nappy headed" to "empty headed!"

NBC/ABC should replace Imus with Al "Not So" Sharpton. That would be the most PC and right thing to do. Imus could then kiss some Opie and Anthony ass and get on their XM network. Howie Stern would be happy because he would still have Imus to talk about since he sold out to Bubba the Love Sponge and the other dregs of the radio society. et al., Imus would be happy to still be able to work in radio, NBC/ABC will be happy even though the Sharpton show probably draws a share lower than Air America, Sharpton will never be happy so it doesn't matter. The media would be happy because they still have this train wreck to talk about.

Al Sharpton is always looking for some tiny mis-step by someone to insert himself as the speaker for all black people to further his black racisim agenda. Al takes a small comment and extrapolates it into a major full blown issue. Al Sharpton acts like Imus stood up on a podium in Washington D.C. and called the entire black population of the US a bunch of Ghetto Ni*gers. Sharpton is such an idiot and IMO has zero credibility since the fraud purportrated by Tawana Brawley and company. Big mouth AL came to her rescue and accused just about every white male in NY of being a racists and rapists. People like Al Sharpton is one of the reasons that racisim is alive and well in the US. The more people here all of his racist crap the more people want to avoid the issue. Who in the hell wants to have all of this twisted bullshit shoved down you throat by some angry black man. No one.

yes, and from what I hear on my scanner, hams do it all the time.
They're supposed to use only the minimum power needed for communications, but I frequently hear hams using the two meter repeaters when they could communicate simplex instead.

Hams living on the same street as each other, just a couple of houses away from each other in the same very small village, while they're all at their homes.

And this wasn't during nets. It would be understandable if it was during nets, since then they're trying to communicate with others who might not hear them otherwise.

U.S.A.

Radio Shack brand.

I couldn't find any model number printed on it itself.

The model number was printed on the box, but the person who bought it either kept the box or threw it out.

Don't pay any attention to Mark Morgan, he is the resident idiot spammer over on the rec.radio boards. I'm sure you have one too on the Imus fan boards, it seems that each news group has their own special needs "idiot".

Demanding that I not post by my screen name or you will continue your spam attack on the NG's is unacceptable. Mark Morgan: Super Idiot, Thread Hi-Jacker, Spammer, self proclaimed fellationist, liar, and apparently unable to pass a simple extra class ham examination.

I forgot to mention that the hams I heard using more power than necessary for communications with whom they were communicating at the time were hams who got their ham liscenses when Morse Code was still required to get a ham liscense.

32492: Are there any weak points in Islam that enable the kaafirs (Disbelievers) to attack it?

(Go here for Reference & More Questions & Answers about Islam & Muslims: http://books.google.co.uk/books?vid=ISBN1861791542)

Question:

As you know Muslims are facing many challenges, pressures and criticisms from non-Muslims in the world. In light of this atmosphere, should we Muslim not be the most open and honest about our shortcomings and try to tackle them as opposed to being overly defensive and seeming to make excuses or cover our faults? The reason for this question is that if we seem to deny or gloss over obvious shortcomings it will not help us to overcome them. Perhaps some Muslims feel that to deal with our problems openly will assist the kufaar in their attacks on Islam. Please advise.

Answer:

Praise be to Allaah.

Firstly:

There are no weak points in Islam _ praise be to Allaah _ that the Muslim needs to worry about. Islam is the perfect religion of Allaah, and Allaah says (interpretation of the meaning):

"And the Word of your Lord has been fulfilled in truth and in justice"

[al-An'aam 6:115]

One of the scholars said that this means, it tells the truth in its reports and is just in its rulings.

Allaah has blessed us by completing His religion and perfecting the blessing, as He says (interpretation of the meaning):

"This day, I have perfected your religion for you, completed My Favour upon you, and have chosen for you Islam as your religion"

[al-Maa'idah 5:3]

If an Islamic ruling seems to a person to be a weak point, he should realize that the fault lies in his way of thinking, because some of the rulings of sharee'ah that are absolutely wise and just may appear otherwise to some people, either because of their whims and desires, or because it goes against what people are used to in their lives, that goes against sharee'ah. For example, some think that a man's being the protector and maintainer of women is a weak point in Islam, because they are used to something which is contrary to that and which also goes against the fitrah (natural inclination of man).

Secondly:

An important matter which should be pointed out here is that it is not permissible for anyone to speak about the rulings of Islam or the tafseer of Qur'aan or the meanings of hadeeth, rather that should be referred to the scholars who are well-versed in knowledge.

What happens is that a question is put to an ordinary Muslim, and he cannot find an answer for it or he gives a wrong answer, or it leaves some doubt in his heart that he cannot rid himself of.

"if only they had referred it to the Messenger or to those charged with authority among them, the proper investigators would have understood it from them (directly). Had it not been for the Grace and Mercy of Allaah upon you, you would have followed Shaytaan (Satan), save a few of you"

[al-Nisa' 4:83 _ interpretation of the meaning]

Hence we say that Allaah has protected the religion for us through the scholars and has enabled them to understand it correctly so as to refute hostile ideas and explain its wisdom to people. That is not for the ordinary people, rather it is only for the elite, namely the scholars.

Some of scholars used to challenge people to bring them a verse that contradicts another verse or a hadeeth, or a hadeeth that contradicts another hadeeth or a verse of Qur'aan, and they would explain to them anything that appeared to be a contradiction, and they used to openly challenge everyone on this matter.

Al-Daaraqutni _ who was one of the imams of hadeeth _ stood in Baghdad as a khateeb and said: "O people of Baghdad! No one can tell lies against the Messenger of Allaah (peace and blessings of Allaah be upon him) whilst I am alive." These words indicate the depth of their knowledge and understanding of Islam, which was so great that the people of falsehood could not attack Islam or introduce into it things that were not part of it.

Hence our advice to this questioner and other Muslims, especially those who mix with kuffaar because of their work or because they live in their countries, is to strive to seek knowledge and to learn the correct rulings of Islam that are derived from the Qur'aan and Sunnah, whilst paying attention to learning the reasons behind these rulings, so that they will have knowledge with which to refute the specious arguments of those who seek to attack Islam, and this will enable them to call people to Allaah with proper insight and understanding.

And Allaah knows best.

I can't speak for 160 meters since I haven't listened to it in a while, but after listening to 2 meters and 11 meters, I consider 11 meters more of "real communications" than two meters is.

CB was meant to facilitate personal communications among it's users (which is exactly what it has been and is being used for).

Hams like to say the ham bands aren't a hobby band, that it's a public service band. And like to call the personal communications on cb "illegal hobby use of cb".

I have listened to both. The ham bands are the hobby type communications while the CB band is real personal communication (it's intended use).

Just because you hams like to call personal cb communications "hobby" uses doesn't make it so.

What's really funny is the hams trying to take over the FRS bands and legal GMRS users both say the FRS should only be used for substantial communications, but what each says disagrees with the other.

The GMRS users say the FRS bands should only be used for substantial communications like talking to your wife while you're pumping gas at the gas station and you're wife is inside the gas station building, or about picking up groceries.and that FRS should never ever be used for non-substantial communications like talking about radio dx.

While the hams are saying that FRS should only be used for substantial communications like talking about radio DX and should never ever be used for insubstantial communications like talking to your wife about non-radio matters, such as picking up groceries.

I'd like to see those two groups together in a radio newsgroup.

Of course, it's also kind of funny that a lot of the GMRS users who insist on following all of the rules and all of the laws all of the time, and saying that "ignorance of the law is no excuse, so you're still a criminal who shouldf be fined and/orput in prison for doing so" are also breaking Federal law theirselves without even realizing they're doing so.

They claim that they're using GMRS for perfectly legal purposes such as talking to their wife while they're pumping gas in their car while their wife is inside the gas station building picking up snacks.

Well, to thjose GMRS users, look at the gas pumps and read what's on them. It says it's against federal law to use any two-way radio device within twenty five feet of any gas station or any fueling area.

So by doing so, in your own words, "ignorance of the law is no excuse so you're still a criminal and should be fined and.or put in prison for doing so"

I don't really think you should be fined or put in prison for doing so unless you're intentionally trying to blow up the gas station and everyone in and around it, then you should be.

2494. Cross field antnnas

There may be a new take on antenna design.

The Cross field antenna is said to have as much as 5db gain over a traditional quarter wave. It has a bandwidth of 30% of the operating frequency. It does this all at a height of only 3% of a wavelength.

If made into a CB antenna it would be about one foot tall.

Sharpton and Jesse Jackoff don't say a word about the rappers who talk about women like that all the time. They don't dare to. Nothing but a couple of poverty pimping asswipes. If everyone in America was well off those 2 turds would be out of a job, so it is in their interest to keep poor people poor. Bitching about Imus is just a way to focus attention on something besides their money grubbing asses.

I've read a few things about cross field antennas and it seems that the jury is still out whether the things really work as some claim they do. I'm not really convinced. Yeah you do get a signal from such an antenna but is the EM wave being generated as the proponents claim or is it due to some other mechanism. That will take a lot more theory and some very carefully performed experiments. You would figure if it was so easy and obvious that in the past 100 plus years of radio it would have been invented long ago and proved by experiment.

more nonsense, the radio is not functioning correctly. you spouted out some statement that was incorrect and instead of just saying you made an error. or that you misunderstood you posted this useless garbage.
if you get a 60HZ hum coming from a bad transformer in a power supply you don't need a scope to detect it. and I certainly have never had any troubles hearing one before.

sharpton is a raciest opportunist.
This is disgusting and must be reversed...
PLEASE....
Send your IMUS e-mails DIRECTLY to Keep is short but tell them your not happy with their decision and you will boycott there station and the products sold on them lets flood their e-mail account!!!!!!!!!!!!

we can do this!!!!

See other stuff that rev al has done...

1987: Sharpton spreads the incendiary Tawana Brawley hoax, insisting heatedly that a 15-year-old black girl was abducted, raped, and smeared with feces by a group of white men. He singles out Steve Pagones, a young prosecutor. Pagones is wholly innocent - the crime never occurred - but Sharpton taunts him: ''If we're lying, sue us, so we can ... prove you did it.'' Pagones does sue and eventually wins a $345,000 verdict for defamation. To this day, Sharpton refuses to recant his unspeakable slander (''Never, ever!'') or to apologize for his role in the odious affair.

1991: A Hasidic Jewish driver in Brooklyn's Crown Heights section accidentally kills Gavin Cato, a 7-year-old black child, and anti-Semitic riots erupt. Sharpton races to pour gasoline on the fire. At Gavin's funeral he rails against the ''diamond merchants'' - code for Jews - with ''the blood of innocent babies'' on their hands. He mobilizes hundreds of demonstrators to march through the Jewish neighborhood, chanting, ''No justice, no peace.'' A rabbinical student, Yankel Rosenbaum, is surrounded by a mob shouting ''Kill the Jews!'' and stabbed to death.

1995: When the United House of Prayer, a large black landlord in Harlem, raises the rent on Freddy's Fashion Mart, Freddy's white Jewish owner is forced to raise the rent on his subtenant, a black-owned music store. A landlord-tenant dispute ensues; Sharpton uses it to incite racial hatred. ''We will not stand by,'' he warns malignantly, ''and allow them to move this brother so that some white interloper can expand his business.'' Sharpton's National Action Network sets up picket lines; customers going into Freddy's are spat on and cursed. ''We're going to see that this cracker suffers,'' says Sharpton's colleague Morris Powell. On Dec. 8, one of the protesters bursts into Freddy's, shoots four employees point-blank, then sets the store on fire. Seven employees die in the inferno.

If Sharpton were a white man he would be a political leper, spurned everywhere but the fringe. But far from being spurned, he is shown much deference.Politicians embrace and court him. And journalists report on his comings and goings while politely sidestepping his career as a hate mongering, rabble-rousing bucket of scum.

Why does he refuse to apologize to Steven Pagones or the family of Yankel Rosenbaum or the loved ones of those who were burned alive at Freddy's Fashion Mart? They know him for what he is. As they can testify, Sharpton is a vicious liar and a dangerous bigot. As a matter of moral hygiene, the politicians and the press should say so too.

It must have been a boring evening in that the Lavender Lads didn't show up in their usual purple-tufted regalia. Roger almost went home...almost. But he held out for Closing Hour.

So sad for Woger that the liquor flowed, but the "likker" he was in search of was not in attendance this evening. Too bad. Mark would have liked to have joined Woger for a bit of "likker", though the two of them would have been at odds over getting the best of the best. Woger and Mark would have concluded the evening at The Lounge arm-wrestling over who "got" the cutest Lavender Lad. Mark would have gone for the biggest 'hulk' and Roger, by nature, would opt for the youngest looking one.

One can see them now. Roger, ever the salivating pervert, looking at the young Lavender Lads while Mark, who as usual has nothing going for him, sits in the corner and tells Roger, "only in your dreams, roger".

Closing Hour: Synopsis.

Woger may or may not go home with a Lavender Lad. Mark goes home alone to be led by his nose by Gavi who has Mark's Bisexual, Pagan, Magickal Jewish agenda laid out for Mark to cowtow to. Mark is a follower, easily led by Gav. Gav's agenda is, by default, Mark's agenda.

Mark is a follower. He has no purpose than to be the weak link.

Right on... Jim is just doing what most out here do when they make an error.
They'll do anything to try and cover it up.

Too bad for Dave Bile, Roger doesn't even go to the Shipwreck Lounge, it's more his style when he swings straight since it is a redneck bar.

And why does not-so-Sharpton and Jackass Jackson refuse to apologize to the Duke players for all the racial hatred they stirred up when they all but condemed the player of rape without a shred of evidence except the word of an accuser? Reason: Duke players are white, accuser is black.

Those two clowns may have started out on the side of justice, but their frequent rushing-to-judgement does more harm than good. They have become the antithesis of their own cause by instigating racially charged lynch mobs.

>If Don Imus were black, would not-so-Sharpton and Jackass Jackson be

The issue is no longer one of the color of a person's skin, but of the -thickness- of their skin. If people don't like what someone says they can just tune out. The ratings drop, the guests go somewhere else, the sponsors pull out, and the show gets canned. At least that's the way it's supposed to work in a free-market society.....

Hogwash. The .3-3kHz limits were standardized (by the military) because researchers discovered, over half a century ago, that the bandwidth carried the majority of -intelligibility- in the human voice. IOW, by limiting the frequency range of the vocal spectrum, transmitted speech can be understood using much less power than when transmitting using the full voice bandwidth.

That depends on how much you bump up the boom on those 24" JBLs inside your sub-compact riceburner. The sad thing is that when those kids go deaf they will collect welfare for their self-inflicted disability.

The regulations are very clear about making the distinction between

For transmitting, no.
For receiving, yes (provided it does not exceed unintentional

I stated how could one detect it without a scope? please reread my post and comprehend better.

100 Hz is hearable or percieved. As I stated before there is a subtle difference bwetween audible and hearable. Yes you can "hear" 100Hz if increase the signal power compared to a 1000Hz tone. But at equal power desity, a 100 Hz tone by most people is not "hearable" or audible. The same goes for the higher end of the audio spectrum.
Granted some have better sensitivity to a wider spectrum of audiio frequencies.

Besides this tangent has gone far beyond the scope of the original post and realy was not my intention. My intention was to discuss the detection of the offending signal with and without a scope. Not to discuss what is audible to your ear or the frequency response of your hearing.

thank you

I didn't see anything in his post about the loudness of this 100 Hz noise. Whether it was "hearable" or "audible", it was detected nonetheless. And apparently it was loud enough to cause a problem, so it's safe to assume that this "noise" (his word) was detected without a scope. Your damage-control explanation about subtle differences in definitions just doesn't resonate.

Unfortunately for you the FCC considers mere possession of an illegally modified transceiver capable of operating on 11 meters to be against the regs. Therefore it is illegal.
If you have a problem with this check the FCC enforcement web site for examples of high dollar forfeitures for such actions.

That maybe true in your perception. Still my first statement is not all that wrong. With communication receivers that I deal with have high pass filters centered near 300Hz along with low pass filters to filter above about 3000Hz. So if a 100Hz signal is causing interference, it should not be heard if it is passing through the audio block. I did forget that there is means for a low frequency(below 300Hz) signals can bypass the audio block and get to a speaker. Even still the quality of speakers in low tier CB radios probably do not have that great of a frequency response. Then also a harmonic of the 100Hz signal if large enough could pass through the audio block.

LIke I said I never intended to get off on a tangent on audible or hearable signal levels and human hearing response. I still thought that I was in part correct with my first statement that a 100Hz signal is at the low end of "hearable" and is best detected with a scope. What I did forget is that the third harmonic and greater would be very audible. I findeed that were the case.

If I am at fault of anything it is not taking enough to to be more explicit and to general in my comments.

I have. In every case (except dealers) the owner has also been transmitting with too much power and/or on the wrong freq. If that wasn't the case then they never would have had their station

Here's the scorecard the day after.

Imus- unemployed but not hurting financially.
Rutgers bball girls- hurting but healing from a stupid comment from an old fool.
MSNBC & CBS Radio- exposed as the spineless corporate suits they are.
MSNBC & CBS Radio sponsors- spineless suits owned by race-baiters.
David Gregory et al- exposed as rainy-day opportunististic turds.
Francesa, Deitl et al- unveiled as true stand-up friends.
Sharpton- Getting richer and setting race relations back another 50 years.
Imus Ranch kids and kids with cancer (all races)- losing ground.
Hip-hop culture- still degrading women and holding down the black race in the name of free speech.
Ebonics- still spoken without retribution by blacks only.
AND Sharpton is still BLACK

You are assuming that the source of the noise is a signal that's passing through the filter, and a secondary assumption that the amplitude of that noise is low enough as to be attenuated by the filter to 'subaudible' levels.

Your first mistake was jumping to a conclusion before you had the

Dave,
I hope you don't mind a 'thank you' from me.

it seems that some folks on here just choose to be right and will dig up the smallest possible point that gives them that appearance. :(

The last time i spoke with a representative from the FCC was at a local Amateur radio Users Group meeting. What he had to say pretty much colored my perception of the regulations: "possession of illegally modified gear, even for the purposes of 'listening' is sufficient to prove intent to use and thus sufficient to prove guilt".

That was his viewpont, and considering that he stated it before a group of hams (and non-hams), it made it a 'public policy statement'. Given this statement, it is safer to err on the side of caution than to argue the points ad-infinitum.

what say you?

For cb'ers yerlling audio,

You all know the hams don't like you yelling "AUDIO, AUDIO, AUDIO"
into your mikes all the time.

Instead, you're supposed to do what the hams do and yell "RADIDIO, RADIDIO, RADIDIO" into your mikes all the time.

Name that rep. And why is your perception of the regulations now "colored"? I thought you said they were spelled out in black and white..... and they are. For once you were right and now you're trying to backpedal on the facts? You're a goof, Eric.

Let's eliminate the middleman from your second-hand "public policy statement" allegedly from the FCC: name your source.

It doesn't say you can't use any receiver, it says you can not make any changes to any transmitter. The FCC considers posession of a modified transmitter as illegal.

You mean the shortened antenna that combines a helix and a loading coil stacked on top of each other which facilitates a more even current distribution?

Considering that the transmitter in question was never certificated for use on the CB, and that this rule is to be taken in context with the whole of Part 95, I think your argument is pretty weak.

>It doesn't say you can't use any receiver,

No, it doesn't.

> it says you can not make any >changes to any transmitter.

It says you cannot make any changes to a transmitter that has been certificated to operate on the CB. Any other interpretation is pulling the rule out of the scope of Part 95.

> The FCC considers posession of a modified >transmitter as illegal.

You have yet to provide an authoritative reference to this claim.

How can you understand the law when you don't even understand basic

So you cop-out twice then run away? Gee Dave, that doesn't help to support your claim at all, especially when you are arguing with one of the most fervent opponents of illegal CB in this group. Maybe you should preach your self-proclaimed knowledge of the law to the hammie newsgroups..... after looking at the FCC enforcement website (as per your suggestion) it's clear that your legal prowness is needed there much more than here.

you failed to consider. the radio in question (an HTX-100) cannot be modified explicitly for receive on the frequency range from 24.000-30.000 WITHOUT also modifying the transmitters capabilities. both functions are tied together within the radio's main chip. Therefor, this argument has merit on its face and in whole.

also, because said radio was modified for 'out of band' operation, it makes it also unacceptable (to the fcc) for use on the amateur bands it was designed for (in this case, 10 meters).

in this case, the radio in its entirety (not the inseparable sections called receiver and transmitter) must be viewed as a whole, period. The "separate functions" argument does not apply.

and the receiver in question here also controls the transmitter. thus, the argument of "listening only" does not apply as one could transmit on those frequencies as well with this particular radio.

part 95 still applies, even to equipment being used within its spectrum of jurisdiction without proper authorization (and using the radio originally stated in this discussion would fall under both part 95 and part 97 as a violation.)

No, I didn't, as it was mentioned previously. But -you- failed to consider that the radio was never certificated for transmitting on the CB, so the rule regarding modification of a CB transmitter (and note that it doesn't say 'transceiver') is moot.

Seek legal advice from your estranged tag-team partner -- he ran away for a reason.

Use on ham bands is not the issue, Eric. But if you really want to go that route, there is no rule (regulation, law, etc) prohibiting the modification of any ham equipment, period. Quite the contrary, the modification of ham equipment is one of the cornerstones of amateur radio.

>in this case, the radio in its entirety (not the inseparable sections called >receiver and transmitter) must be viewed as a whole, period. The "separate >functions" argument does not apply.

I not only cited the rules, I copied them word for word. It was not my decision or perogative to make the distinction between a transmitter and a transceiver -- the FCC did it. If you have a problem with that, whine about it to Riley, not me.

One "could" transmit on the CB with a file, a screwdriver and a car battery. And one "could" commit murder with a gun, a knife, an axe, a baseball bat, etc, etc. But it is the -action- that is illegal, not the mere ownership of a baseball bat. Maybe you don't understand the difference between the two but the FCC does, and that is why they wrote the rules the way they did.

Yes, Part 95 still applies, as per the rule I already posted but will post again because of your limited comprehension (emphasis added):

47CFR95.409:
(a) YOU MUST USE AN FCC CERTIFICATED CB TRANSMITTER AT YOUR CB STATION. You can identify an FCC certificated transmitter by the certification label placed on it by the manufacturer. You may examine a list of certificated equipment at any FCC Field Office or at FCC
Headquarters. USE OF A TRANSMITTER WHICH IS NOT FCC CERTIFICATED VOIDS
YOUR AUTHORITY TO OPERATE THE STATION.

Let's see now..... I did my own research by both citing and quoting the FCC rules that you refuse to read or understand. But instead of taking advantage of an apparently super-easy way to prove me wrong in a public and open forum, all you and Dave can do is whine. Enough with the cop-outs, Eric -- either post the link and prove me wrong or take your own advice and "STFU on the matter." Or, even better, plonk me like your legally-illiterate butt-buddy.

Why Eric? Is it all in your mind or is it really happening?
If it's in your mind, there is counseling and therapy that will help. If it's really happening, well move to a different city or try to make friends better.

Again, he's said "listen" and it a ham radio, no bearing for part 95 CB.

NO, again wrong Eric. Ask your friend at the lawyers office or send email to that FCC rep you just remembered you spoke with.

Moot point again. One can buy an all band radio, doesn't matter at all what his license class is, but he can only transmit on the freqs his license will allow. So with your logic, if I'm Tech, using my Kenwood TS-2000X on 2 Meter, mere possession of this radio because it goes outside of my license is illegal. LOL!!!

LOL!!! You can't provide it Eric, that's why I was on your case to begin with.
Now get a hold of Reilly, have him post it direct from the '.Gov" account and I'll be happy to concede and admit that I was wrong, but no "supposed" chats really. my initial reason for posting was that it was not certified for 11 meter operation. I also further pointed out early on that the radio could not be modified so as to allow 'receive only' access of the spectrum in question (the design of the radio's main control circuitry makes this a physical impossibility).

again, on another point, the fcc has mandated (through Riley Hollingsworth and others) that "posession is sufficient to prove...". The meaning of this is very clear on their enforcement pages.

use of the radio at all in its modified state without proper authorization from the fcc is in violation. please prove to me where it isn't (and do your own damned searches).

where, no you did not. you quotes rules cited by someone else and you did so out of context in order to make yourself look 'right'. you have yet to cite one single fact that is relevant without attempting to denigrate the source first. your recent postings are the best example of this.

irrelevant example. and this would be a "spark gap" transmitter that would transmit everywhere (mostly below 2 Mhz as that is where almost all of its energy is)

> And one "could" commit murder with a gun, a knife, an axe, a irrelevant. comparison of apples to oranges has no meaning to this 'discussion'

owning a baseball bat has nothing to do with owning a modified radio (a modification given the model of radio in question that would make it illegal per the FCC regulations). you are still comparing apples to oranges here.

> Maybe you don't understand the > difference between the two but the FCC does, and that is why they

yet the fcc has also made statements (per their representatives) that "posession is sufficient to prove...." and that is a public policy statement (and per the US legal system, a "public policy" has the force of law).

and I reiterate, the HTX-100 radio in question cannot be modified as a "receiver only" on this bad without also modifying the transmitter. The fcc views this modification as "intent to use" outside of the above regulation.

what research? where are your facts?

I have the schematics here for the radio in question (I happen to OWN the radio in question in its UNMODIFIED STATE) and I have a copy of the modifications that can be done to this radio. I have checked with the Original company of manufacture for this line of radios (The circuit board clearly has uniden printed on it) and was informed that the design of the control circuitry ON THIS RADIO would not prevent the transmitter from being modified to operate on the specified range as detailed in the original posting.

The fcc has made it clear (both in their enforcement bureau postings and in the persons of various representatives including Mr. Hollingsworth) that posession is sufficient to show intent to use (and thus prove guilt). That is the current policy of the fcc.

The MODIFIED HTX-100 as originally posted in illegal in their eyes and no amount of naysaying on your part will make it otherwise. The rules and their policy appear in conflict (and the typical behavior in government is this: if the policy is NEWER than the regulations, the policy wins out).

This is the position I am operating from. The government will win if a case regarding a device like this were presented before an administrative judge or in a civil proceeding. The person in posession would end up being fined and the equipment being confiscated. This has happened and there are numerous cases on the books where it is true (check the fcc enforcement pages, they have lots of cases there where fines were issued and equipment siezed and either sold or destroyed).

any arguments given in contrary to the the current 'policy' in the fcc are considered irrelevant.

Correction: it is not -certificated- for -transmitting- on the -Citizen's Band-.

You mean there is no way to disable the RF amplifier chain? You can't remove the final? You can't cut the PTT wire? Wow, that's one really well-built radio, huh Eric?

Sure, just as soon as you prove that singing the Star Spangled Banner while standing on your head in a corn field isn't illegal. But considering all the effort you have wasted typing up your excuses to avoid posting a link to something that you claim is -SO- easy to find,
and would quickly vindicate both you and your misguided sidekick,
leads me to believe that it can't be found.

IOW, it's your claim; "do your own damned searches."

Very relevant, since it transmits a signal in the CB, with emissions that exceed Part 15, and is not certificated. It is, by the letter of the law, illegal under Part 95.

>> And one "could" commit murder with a gun, a knife, an axe, a

Both apples and oranges are fruits.
Both apples and oranges have seeds.
Both apples and oranges have a rind.
Both apples and oranges grow on trees.
Both apples and oranges are used to make juice.
Both apples and oranges are sources of sugar.
Both apples and oranges are found in the produce section of your local supermarket....

Are you getting it yet, Eric? Maybe you should research the origin of the phrase that you abused before you abuse it again.

Oops, too late.

So -that's- your problem, huh? Someone beat you up as a kid with an illegally modified baseball bat?

ROTFLMMFAO!!

Enough, you're killing me!!!!!!!

Do yourself a favor and post the link, Eric. I'll never let up until either you properly cite your source or admit that it doesn't exist.
Take your pick. It makes no difference to me either way, but believe me when I say that you are done giving bad legal advice to an unsuspecting public. Because THAT, Eric, is illegal.

Man,
I'd hate to have this guys life. :)

It seems that Eric is the butt of everyones joke of late.
Recently a discussion happened on 38 LSB where he was the center of attention. One of the other people actually walked up to him in front of the place where he works and presented him with a business card. Emblazoned across that card were the words "PHONE PATCH". HAHAHAHA

And to top it off, Old Eric was over on 19 AM not 30 minutes ago claiming how he was all pissed because a conversation that happened in person was suddenly all over the radio! What'd you expect, BLINDBOY?!?! Isn't it obvious by now? You are a loser!!!!! I'll just bet that old Tim Hoffman is going to show up one of these days and you'll be cowering behind the counter somewhere hoping he doesn't see your fat ass!

And whats with this so-called phone call you got tonight informing you of the action taking place? Dare I say it, it looks like someone is pressing your buttons! Man, I have never heard such a load of crying in all my life!

And here he is.... Presented live for your entertainment... The butt-end joke of the entire universe! Eric Oyen N7ZZT in Phoenix!

BTW, if anyone just happened to get a recording of the goings on, can you post it somewhere where the rest of us can hear?

You guys get your fair share of media coverage too, mostly about Jeter's errors and you're beat up pitching staff, before this Tribe series. Speaking of Boston, Crisp looks like a bust, and it's too soon to say how Marte will pay off with that trade.

They do have a limit. They dumped Shef for prospects, and are moving toward youth. George is out of the picture.

I have no problem with a cap. My problem is the biggest complainers were the Sox fans. Then they go out and buy a championship, and it's OK all of a sudden. This year, they were accused of tampering with Lugo and Drew. They are already floating rumors in the Boston press that they might go after AROD. We aren't your enemy anymore. They are.

Which media is that Vinnie? Newsday made a point a couple of weeks ago that their backpage had the Yanks highlighted 9 days in a row. The Mets, IMHO who are a better team, were shunted to the inside pages. The Sox are very popular on the east end of the island (Yaz home boy). If you are talking national media then its about time the Sox were talked about because, as you know, the Yanks are a circus as per George's discretion.

BTW, the cable you sent works fine. Thanks mate.

No. He is 78, and seems do have handed full power to the GM. The GM made moves that George would never allow. George is not in great health, and has stopped giving interviews. My guess is he is losing it.

Are you saying that an increase in impedance will not cause an increase in standing waves?

Regardless of power out, the LED should not be on unless there is power being reflected. 0% of 1 Watt is the same as 0% of 100 Watts.

If the radio is standard, how high should the SWR be for the LED to light (as he says, full brightness)?
Working with a guess of 3.5:1, and his measured SWR reading of 1.2:1

3.5:1 SWR = 55.55% reflected
1.2:1 SWR = 9.09% reflected

If that meter is correct, for that light to be on simply because of higher output power, the radio would need to be tuned to over 6 times it's standard output power.
That's not allowing for losses in the coax, which would make that required output even higher.

It is far more likely that the LED is correctly warning the owner, while the "calibrated" meter is being affected by coax or additional components. I have seen these "calibrated" meters show a perfect SWR when the true reading was in the red.
Remember, what you are referring to as "calibration" is not really calibration as such. The meters are cheap, poorly made, not designed to be accurate and NOT calibrated to any accepted standard.

Looking at the facts...
The meter and light agree when on the mobile antenna.
The base antenna is believed to be faulty.

The base antenna SWR is known to jump about.
Built in SWR meters are generally unreliable.
Everything appears to point at the antenna or coax being faulty, the warning light being correct and the SWR meter being wrong.

Peter.

Maybe, but it could be possible to fix it.

> But I don't understand
> why my needle and light are contradicting themselves.

SWR meters are not 100% reliable. The reading they give can be affected by factors other than the true antenna SWR. It is possible for the SWR meter to show a perfect SWR when the true antenna SWR is in the red.

What you are really looking for is the antenna tuning... how well that pointy thing is tuned to the radio, right?
Unfortunately, that is not quite what the meter and the warning light are indicating. They are reading and indicating the apparent matching of the whole system - antenna, coax, internal circuits, etc.
Because of this, the actual reading given may be affected by the coax (even the length of it) and the components inside the radio - even the tracks and wires to the antenna socket.

There is also another issue, regarding coax and loss. The internal meter (or any fitted at the radio end of the coax) will be adjusted using the power out of the radio, with no losses - but the reflected power has suffered coax loss both on the way to the antenna and the way back.
It staggers back to the radio like a CBer staggering back to his wife

So, on to the question of why the LED showing is different... maybe it is reading at a different point or, for some other reason (such as circuit design), is seing something that the meter is not.

That still leaves you with a couple of problems, right?

1. which do you believe?
If one device says high, another says low - believe the high reading.
There are two reasons for this approach...
1.1: Safety - ignoring a high SWR may knacker the radio, checking the reason for one should not.
1.2: Meters do not usually hallucinate. They are far more likely to be blind to reflected power than to see it when it is not there.

2. How do you get a real SWR reading that you can be reasonably sure of.
First of all, don't rely too much on internal meters, they are in a bad position to see what is really going on with the antenna.
Get an external SWR meter. It does not have to be an expensive one, you are not bothered about small errors (but you must draw the line when a meter apparently shows a f*cked antenna to be perfect). If possible measure the SWR at the base of the antenna.

> Also let me add that I > am calibrating the swr meter each time I check it.

It is important to note that the meter "calibration" is not really calibration, it is merely adjusting to compensate for different power levels. The meter is not truely calibrated - it can be reading incorrectly.

Even if the SWR meter was factory calibrated to accepted standards, the stated accuracy would only apply with a purely resistive load - which your antenna will not be.

There are ways to check if the SWR meter is reading correctly, you don't need any expensive equipment. However, as noted above, any such tests only show how accurate it is on purely resistive loads... in real use, accuracy can go out the window.

Peter.

Also more likely his favorite avenue of retail distribution, Ebay, has closed the doors on him. Since he does not have a merchants account the only way he can take credit cards is via Paypal. In a nutshell no or far to little profit margin. I bet he has yet to recover fully from

I just leased a brand new 07 pickup truck, and I have a Mirage 6600 radio converted for use as a CB.

I have some limitations on antenna choices, such as I park in a parking garage every day for work. Not to mention that I don't want to scratch the paint with a Magnet Mount and sonce it's a lease, a permanent roof mount is out. I was thinking of either a 108" steel whip attached to the trailor hitch, or 2 fiberglass whips on each front side of the bed.

I might get an amp later, so performace means alot also.

Thanks for your advice!

I've done literally dozens of roof installs on lease vehicles. The dealerships usually don't mind as long as it's done by a competent tech. Give them a call. Either they will have their own tech do it or outsource it to a local shop.

I would say the roof. You can put a shorty on there while commuting to work, and keep a firestick or ss whip behind the seat when you hit the highway or find a nice hill.

The Wilson 1000 or 5000 will take a little heat, it will help you get out better. A 100 watts or so will work fine.

If I'm going with the roof, what's to gain with a permanent mount vs. a Wilson magnet mount?

The only problem with a Wilson (I ran one one my old truck when I first started this job), is that I must stop every day before entering and after exiting to remove or replace the whip. This procedure gets really old very quickly, and god forbid if I should forget to put it back on and fire up a conversation...

I don't really know much about amps, other than you're not supposed to use them for cb's. Do they do anything besides making your signal travel out further?

Check out the Skipshooter fiberglass antennas. I've had one for years on top of my aluminum camper shell and it gets out great barefoot but will take up to 1500 Watts of power. They come in several lengths with the shortest one around 2 or 3 feet and they are the strongest fiberglass antenna made and have a tunable tip. I have mine mounted on a ball and spring mount but I'm sure you could find a mount you like. On your rooftop it should really work great.

>Wilson magnet mount?

Versatility. You can put any standard 3/8-24 threaded whip on there, whether it's super short or the big 9' whip. All you need is a 25 cent wrench in the glove compartment to get them on or off. It's also cheaper in the long run since mag mounts often get stolen, and whips are both cheap and plentiful (especially at garage sales). And no mag-mount will outperform a 9' whip -- period.

The reason for mounting it on the roof is to get the bottom of the antenna (the part that radiates the most) above all the metal of the vehicle. Mounting the whip to the bumper or trailer hitch and your rear clip will absorb and/or scatter part of your signal, and will affect reception by the same amount.

I see from your other post that you aren't familiar with amps. Just so you know, CB amps are illegal. If you get caught the FCC will either send you a letter telling you to stop, or ask to inspect your station to confiscate your amp. If you ignore the letter, or refuse to let them take your amp, you will get slapped with a fine of several thousand dollars (yes, -thousand-). If you're ok with that, here's the dope on amps:

Your standard 40-channel CB puts out 4 watts of RF. In order to double your range you need to quadruple your power. But as you increase your range you will step on other CBers in the area you are covering, so you need to use the amp with respect to other CBers. At some power level you will no longer get any more range (law of diminishing returns) which usually happens around 100 watts or so, depending on your terrain. Any more power and you are basically in an RF drag race with big dummies with big amps to see who can stomp on everyone else's signal.

If you DX then you may find that power doesn't matter much, skip is either there or it isn't, regardless of how much power you use. In fact, at least one person on this group has DXed half the planet without an amp at all.

If you haven't purchased your amp yet, be warned: most of them are junk. They may claim that they are "linear" but are not, and will put harmonics all over the spectrum, including the neighbor's television. A low-pass filter will help but not completely. Just like everything else, you get what you pay for.

Also, if an amp is rated for 100 watts, don't expect to get more than 25 watts carrier (dead-key). The reason is that most amps are rated for 'peak' power which is fine if you are running SSB, but the majority of CB is done with AM. In that mode, peak power is four times the carrier, so you must reduce the amp's input until the carrier is one fourth of the rating of the amp.

Hope that helps.

I think that a permanent roof mount will work, IF I can find a good Short antenna so that I won't have to remove it every day. I will let you know how much clearence my truck has on Monday when I get to the parking garage.

Thanks to you all for the honest straight shootin advice!

Byt he way, I haven't cb'd for over 10-15 years. How are the airways, people, etc.... these days. Are there still a lot of non-truckers (not that I dislike truckers) out there?

That was a crack up having Junior Samples stand up there and have a hard time saying BR549..... funney.

I also thought that would be a perfect call sign.

They wouldn't have picked a Sunday as their day to get their communications out for a major event on Monday. Sunday is quiet day on the air over here

hi,
my name is david bowen and well i have a qestion you might not hear often or never have heard. i was wondering if you know of or have or even could find me a CB radio even if you can only hear what people are saying and cant talk back. it sounds dumb but ever since i was 7 i loved watching the "the big boys" drive down the road and wondered what they were always talking about when they are on those long runs to texas,canda, wyoming were ever i use to have a CB but it finally puffed its last breath 2 years ago and now that am 16 i really wanna get back in to hearing what all the "chatter" is my friends dad is a trucker and well i think his job is cool and think i might be a truck so i could be one of " the big boys" i used to see when i was younger.
if you have any ideas or know any one who might help me with getting to be a trucker or would like to tell me whats its really like to be one of the big boys please have them write me a letter or e-mail me

CB radios are easy enough to buy -- go to Radio Shack, and get a decent CB radio with a magnet mount antenna for well under $200. If you want something cheaper, you can get a "rubber duck" antenna, (it looks like a walkie talkie) for even less, but you will have far less range.
To become a trucker, you should probably need to attend a vocational school program to get a truck driver's license. Contact your local DMV (department of motor vehicles) for information on insurance, driver's license requirements, age specifics, and so forth, for your state, as they may vary from state to state.

nothing which is entrely besides the point

the point of enaging in such coment is to derail serious discusion of any radio related topic

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

We are down-sizing the house so I am selling some of my HF rigs.

I have two of these and I am keep one as my primary HF rig, and am selling the other.

It is an SGC model SG-2000 ADSP PowerTalk HF 150 watt Transceiver. It is operates SSB - CW & AM.

This unit covers 2Mhz to 30Mhz on transmit and .5Mhz to 30Mhz on receive. This is continous transmit and receive coverage. It is ideal for MARS work.

The power range is selectable from 50 watts on low power to 150 watts on high power.

The ADSP stands for Adaptive Digital Signal Processing. You can read more about this and the SG-2000 on the SGC website: http://sgcworld.com

This unit is certified for Marine use as well as ham use.

It appears to be in normal working condition. I used it this afternoon on 40 meters. It comes with the SGC mic, the SG-2000 book (240 page book), the ADSP PowerTalk book and the SG-2000 PowerTalk quick start card.

These radios are built like a tank. They are very sophisticated and will equal if not out preform any of the Japanese Ham radio units.

These are used primarily for Marine, Government, Commercial and Military communications.

If you have any questions, please contact me.

I will ship this radio Internationally.

Shipping will be actual cost from my location to yours. My zip code is 80439.

If you have any questions, please email or call me. I am located in Denver, Mountain Daylight Time zone. My email address is: iamw7gsa@gmail.com

The price for everything is $975.00 plus shipping and insurance.

As with all electronic equipment, this item is sold as is but is quaranteed not to be DOA.

Thanks, Bill

Quite A number of (Years or Moons ago) depending on how you keep track of time, someone came to one of the hamfests in Gaithersburg, Maryland, in a large box type of truck, and mounted on top of the truck was a CAPACITOR CANNON of sorts.

I think that I need to clarify a bit - apparently the capacitors did not really explode, but SNAPPED IN DISCHARGE STATE causing a louder than life noise, and could be recharged to do it continuously.

At a push of a button this object sounded like a number of VERY LARGE CHERRY BOMBS going off in succession.

Yes - it was an attention getter.

Does anybody else remember this device and or have a schematic for it?

Well - I would like to thank everyone who submitted a story about getting rid of power line noise, transformers & other hardware falling from top of poles, etc, but nobody has answered my question yet!

What I am looking for is the object described, to make NOISE. Not interference type of noise on a receiver, especially during contests and the like, but as an attention getter! Also, this unit would have NOTHING to do with cannons or other types of units set to actually explode say "gunpowder or the likes" that would cause a harmful explosion to damage any person or property!

I have a specific need for an item as of such!! Originally I said that it might sound like a bunch of Cherry Bombs going off, maybe I should rearrange the wording and say it sounds more like the noise coming from the muzzle of a machinegun!

The likely reason is that the FCC considers the device a CB power amplifier . Lately this federal agency has stepped up its combat against the sale of these illegal amplifiers.

Some time ago a US road side truckers-centre selling illegal devices was heavily fined.

Considering his retail outlet, Ebay, has blocked every attempt to sell the product, His sales has probably been rather low. Thus not profitable. Also the fact that the amp is rather low powered for most "competition" CBers and with the plethera of older 100+ plus ham rigs out on the market, there is not a large market for his amp. Who needs an five watt radio, and a 100 watt amp to drive a big competion amp when you can get a Kenwood TS440 or similar and use it.

Poor profit margin? That term is useful when a product fails to make a profit even after volumous sales.

Since when have you ever sold enough volume to claim poor profit margin?

The real reason is the Telstar focus group took the day off when it came time to determine the demand for the finished product.

It's time to fire the entire marketing department, purchasing department, manufacturing department, and engineering department and go back to delivering newspapers.

How accurate are these SWR/Power/Modulation meters for modulation? I am restoring an old TRC-455. I want to get to 100% or just under. I do have a scope, but figured that would actually be more difficult to measure.

I think a lot has to do with the cost of the meter.
Some of the cheapo ones may be as bad as 25% tolerance... while some of the better ones may be 15% tolerance.
The scope is a much better tool... and easy to visually see 100%. The scope would probably be more like 2-3% accuracy.

Do I inject a 1 KHz tone right into the mic plug, or do I have to go thru the mic?

I would definately use the mic you plan to use with the rig. I usually use 2KHz as a mid-point for audio (voice) adjustment. Then adj your limiter accordingly. This should give you close to what you seek if the 2KHz volume is at a reasonable level that would be representitive of your voice.

P.S. If you had a Voicemax... you could adjust your modulation for 100%... and it would stay at 100% from 100Hz-20KHz... when you were whispering or screaming. That's the beauty of an AGC...

So you won't back your product any more? No customer service?

What's the person that actually bought the amp suppose to do when it goes bad? This assumes that your buddy Gunsmoke bought one.

I've got a old Fostex compressor I sometimes put between my scanner and some amplified speakers. I can hear the TAC units whispering just as loud as the dispatcher. The PRO-96 units have a built in AGC in digital APCO-25 mode. That feature won't work in the analog mode, only digital MOT-II systems.

Mike, the previous model of the Skywave was sold sucessfully for many years. It was only the latest 2879ABTC model with the temperature compensated biasing that was offered in 2006... and then discontinued in 2007. This was due to the increased cost of the new version.

Actually you can h ave poor profit margin even with small sales. With low volume sales the average selling prive needs to be increased s uch that a desired profit can be made. The problem come sinwhen the market can't bare the desired average selloing price to make a reasonable profit. Thus poor profit margin. Most likely his latest adaptation did not sell enough, cost became to high and he was selling the amp far more than what the market could bare. Therefore any price decrease would yield poor profit margins unless sales increase remarkably.

Even in small quantities, 10 boards, you can get a PCB of 40 square inches in the $16 per board range. That is 2 layer FR4 0.062 thick.
That includes silkscreen and solder mask. That is with 5 day delivery.
10 day delivery will be about $2 per board less. IF you do about 5000 boars you should be around $6 per board. You can have a Chinese house do it for about $4 per board in 5K quantity .

Greetings all.
I'm just dropping by to ask a question of the experts. I'm a newbie at CB'ing. It's on my motorcycle, and I can't seem to receive anything. I can transmit loud and clear, but nothing in the receive mode. I have checked everything; volume, squelch, etc. SWR reads within proper range. I have some corrosion around the antenna mount, but everything else seems fine. All connections are solid, too. The most I'll get is static and the indicator showing that a signal is coming in, but nothing other than static.
Any ideas what could be causing me to be able to send but not receive?
Thank you in advance.

Accusing Mark Morgan of "net abuse" on the basis of his posts and x-poasts to rec.radio.amateur.policy smacks more than a little of extreme and outright unabashed homophobia, considering that said group

But then again, you would appear to be an extreme and outright unabashed

Does another radio receive? Does that radio receive on another antenna.

No, it's a compressor for music.

I don't have to defend my degree or my 23 yrs experience in electronic product development and manufacturing. At least not to you.

The fact that you have aggresisvely persue to degrade me only serves to prove to me more that I am correct in my judgement in you success in choice of products and ability to market them.

Well he said his signal indicator works so that should point to something wrong from the AM detector stage to the speaker. IF the ole S-meter is moving means the circuits from the antenna to the AM detector is working to some degree.

I just wonder if the radio has one of those switches that selects CB/PA. Those go bad and the ole s-meter could swing like a tree in a hurricane and no audio out the speaker. I had an old realistic that did that years back. Then again it cou ld be something simple like a blow diode or a blown transistor. Maybe even a bad IC.

I don't know if it's possible to still hear static when the detector is bad, but I suppose it's possible. Either that or the receiver is horribly out of alignment.

Actually I don't think my first comments were derogatory about why the amp no longer is a marketable item. I was expounding my opinion as to why you suffered poor profit margins. If you found that was a derogatory remark then it maybe you who has the very thin skin.

2756. Orbitsonic 200; Mike Wiring Question

My city is halfway through its annual special pickup. On Saturday afternoon, I found a 40-channel Orbitsonic 200 mobile transceiver. It had obviously been left in a basement for quite some time. I opened it up and blew out the dust with compressed air. Then I hooked it up to a motorcycle battery, and the display lights came on. There was no microphone with it, so I can't determine whether it receives or transmits.

There aren't exactly a whole bunch of hits at Google for "orbitsonic, " but it has that circa 1977 look to it. My guess is that it was made by a contract manufacturer and sold at truck stops or at mom-and-pop CB stores. A plate on the back identifies the importer or distributor as the Samn (or SAMN; it's upper case) Electronics Corporation of San Francisco. One of the switches on the front panel is for delta tune, and another is for "ANL." There is no FCC ID code that I can look up.

The microphone plug on the front is a 5-pin DIN-type connection. I've seen some CB microphone wiring diagrams on the 'Net, but before I go connecting pins at random, I'd like to hear from anyone who is familiar with this radio. I've got some other 40-channel CBs, so I will be able to hear any transmissions it makes.

Thanks in advance.

When I'm done driving the big truck for the day, I'm thinking about putting the cb in my pickup, at the end of the day.

My situation is, I park in the garage every night. I have an aluminum camper top on the bed. I also have those darn plastic mirrors.

I really don't want to drill a hole in the body of the bed. I really don't want a whip style mounted on the bumper.

I've looked on Sparky's site for some ideas. I really need a creative mind to help me out here.

Can I mount a fiberglass antenna on my back bumper, basically where the bumper wraps around towards the rear wheel? I can't mount anything in the way of the tailgate. So, I would have to mount on the side of the bumper.

Ok, so you see how this is driving me nuts. How about a lil help?

Thanks.

Really? And here I thought it was due to:

1. Incomplete/inadequate market research;
2. Blatantly hacked design;
3. Fabricated specifications;
4. Proof of non-linearity (in your own literature!!!);
5. Lack of product testimonials (credible or not);
6. Nine square feet (and many other demonstrations of technical incompetence in this group).

But hey, I could be wrong..... was it -really- about cost? Weren't your customers willing to pay for the amp -before- you built it? (the ungrateful bastards!!!) Or was it because your welfare check wasn't large enough to cover the capital overhead? Or did mommy and daddy cut off your allowance?

Get a job.

Actually it would be interesting to see a schematic. Just looking at the evaluation schematic and his photos on Ebay it is not just a copy of the evaluation board. So he had to put some thought behind it. At least give him credit for that. One thing is I am not going to pay that price to see a schematic or reverse engineer it to see how it works. Can do that from the specification.

The only thing that bothers me is this is based on an IC that has been in production for at least 9 yrs. It cousin the SSM2165 has been obsoleted by the SSM2167. From ADI webpage I wonder how long the SSM2166 will remian in production? The 14 pin dip version is obsolete.
Also for the SSM2166 the status column puts a contact ADI. It should be either not reccomended for new designs, obsolete or in production.
I wonder if AD is considering obsoleting the part?

There's your problem. Altitude is everything -- if you don't have the clearance to get into the garage then you don't have enough height for anything more than a rubber ducky. And mounting a larger antenna to the bumper isn't going to make much difference if the top isn't any higher.

Basically you have three options:

1. Don't park in the garage;
2. Remove the antenna before pulling into the garage; or
3. A large whip mounted to the bumper and tied forward, but it won't work very well unless you untie the whip.

It could also be amp noise mistaken for radio static. He needs to take

He hacked the design from a page I cited several years ago while criticizing his earlier splatter-box. The only thought he had was how he could get away with the theft of someone else's intellectual property. His solution was to withhold the schematic. I guess he didn't realize that his amp could be reverse-engineered... duh!!!

Not for that price, for sure. But his latest hack? Yep! I'm going to buy one and do a full -- and FAIR -- evaluation on my bench. I'm just waiting for him to go into "full production".

Which is one reason why I avoid ASICs.

Let's face it, CB is a large wave and needs a large antenna to be effective.
If you don't want to play the game, don't bother. Base loaded antennas and magnet mounts really cramp your style and should be avoided, although a Wilson 1000 mag mount did give acceptable results once on a rental car's roof.

You're right about the DIP being obsolete. This is not an indicator that the SO will also go that route. I checked with Analog Devices before starting this project and they said there are no plans to discontinue at this time. Now, that really doesn't mean anything... but if they discontinue... they discontinue. My opinion is that this will not happen for perhaps five years. By the way... the "check with ADI" on their site has to do with availability at this time. It seems that this chip is undergoing a fab location change... probably moving to China (where else) and the location is not ready. The lead time for this chip right now is 36-38 weeks. It's fortunate I have plenty to get started... since brokers are getting upwards of $10 a piece for these right now.

Wrong. I keep reminding -you- how bad an engineer -you- are. For example.....

You've been spamming this group for over ten years now. In ten years you could have earned the bare-minumum AAS degree in electronics, which would have taken 2-3 years, leaving 7+ years to get some practical experience. Or you could have earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering and had 5+ years experience in a good-paying job. Even if you took the time to earn a Master's degree you could be 2+ years into a -very- lucrative career. It works, Brian. I've done it myself. I'm finishing up my Master's this summer, and just a couple months ago I got back on the horse and found another job as a BE that pays 42K/yr, which is 13K more than I was making at the other station.

Yet YOU chose to spend your time and money on a scheme that has netted you nothing but problems and failure. You still live in your mommy's house and depend on public tax dollars to feed your fat face. You have no significant assets, no job security, and no means to support yourself let alone a family. If there is a girl somewhere on the planet that would have you it is only because she has less confidence and self-worth than you. You are in no better position now than you were 10 years ago. Just older. What a waste.

Yes, I -am- a "fantastic engineer"..... by your standards.

According to Digikey's webpage they have 320 in stock at $5.16 each single unit quantity. Avnet and Arrow have no stock and on teh SSM2166SZ they are quoting upwards to 16 week lead time.

Now that is a mor erealistic lead time. 36 to 38 weeks tells me that the next production run of that IC is not scheduled for at least another 10 weeks and curent production runs are spoken for. I would say that this is not a super high run IC. Just enough though to keep the line open and do a RoHS conversion to the packaging.

First glaring problem with the DSPSCHEM.GIF schematic is in the area of U1A(A1) and centers on the values for RH1 and RH2. I guess the intention there to reduce the gain of the stage. That will happen. What else will happen is that the stage's closed loop gain is less than 1. That is a no no for opamps unless you want an unstable amp. I hope that the 100 Ohm vlaue for RH2 is a misprint. RL1 and RL2 are okay. Otherwise the circuit looks alright for a standard audio clipper. I would like to see another stage of filtering in the output of the clipper but what is there is adequate.

I could care less if you hacked some else's design. That becomes between you and the other designer. I would be interested in seeing the schematic for pure curiosity. Also have stated that Audio compression and clipping do little to improve signal quality other than to make it louder. Louder does not necessarily mean extended range. Then again a majority of CB operators think that their AM signal needs so much audio processing to be "louder" than the next guy.

I am not like Frank. I will wait to you reduce the price after the initial surge in sales. Or maybe a closeout sale.

No others. it's on my motorcycle. The actual radio is a little box about the size of a thin paperback book. Made by Clarion for motorcycles.

heh. whatever man. a coincidence is still just a coincidence. besides, those very same circuits were published over 10 years ago in a couple of textbooks that I used for college/tech school.

hackers have very little to do with it (I should know, I know a few professionally).

What doesn't make sense is why you would want to manufacture a device

It is hardly a "brute force" method of compression. Fact is, it's not a method of compression at all. The point is to clip the transient peaks so the average audio level, and therefore the modulation level, can be increased. When used as intended it has very little distortion.
But if the clipping level is set so low that it starts clipping most of the audio then yes, it will cause bad distortion.

Sure, but first I'll need one of your devices to run across the bench so I can determine your definition of "performance" (due to the very real possibility that you got the definition from the same dictionary as you got the definition of "linear").

I want to screw around and build some homemade antennas.

Will this single quad loop work throughout the band? Says it's 1.8 DB gain over dipole. I was going to build a dipole, but looked rather boring.

Vinnie

By band how much outside teh normal 40 channel band are you expecting to operate?

I used a single loop on 6 meters and got about 600KHz bandwidth with good results. A single loop is rather easy to build and rather cheap.
There are more pronounced nulls off the quad loop compared to a dipole. Also th efeed impedance is about 100 Ohms so a simple quarter wave section of 75 Ohm cable will be all that is needed to match the antenna.

I think it is easily safe to say that Mark is the MAIN reason a moderated group was found to be a necessity. Why do I say this? Look back just a couple of weeks when Mark was absent from this group for several days. The posts suddenly became far fewer, were much more civil, and dealt with Amateur Radio issues for the most part. Then, upon Mark's unfortunate (for us) return, the flooding and thread jacking began again.

I agree with a previous post. It would behoove us to ignore Mark's fecal droppings, his hijacked threads, and his inane, pointless, and poorly authored comments. Note, I said Comments, NOT responses.

My opinion is that it has been ignored because of its marginal need.
At $2.75 per 1000 units budgetary price that is not all that far out of line for low production runs. Now if you want to buy 50 pieces from your favorite broker who deals in obsolete and hard to find parts, yep you might pay $10 to $15 per IC. That would be high price. But in a market that may sell 50K to 100k units per year, you should get the ICs for about $2.25 a piece. Trust me in a consumer electronics market 50K to 100K units per year is small sales. You start to get into big sales at around 1 to 5 million units per year. Then you can get big price breaks.

Tomatch an antenna that is around 100 Ohms impedance needs only what is called a quarter wave matching stub. It is simply an electrical quarterwave length of 75 Ohm coax from the feedpoint to the 50Ohm transmission line.

Simple and works well.

IF coax length is a hangup then you can use a two to one balun.
Actually the length will be between 66% and 80% of ~9 feet depending on the dielectric constant of the material that comprises the coaxial cable's center. Using RG11 polyethelene dielectric will yield about 6 feet.

Also considering that if you want vertical polarization the feedline must come away from the feedpoint orthogonally the run of any length of matching stub would be immaterial.

Actually a quarter wave matching section is better in some ways. All you really do is shorten the main transmission line by the length of the matching section. No real big deal if you can use a ruler. Then using a matching section does predicate the knowledge of using certain tools like a calculator, ruler, a coax cutting and stripping tool and finally a soldering iron.

Not really. Insertion loss of a [ferrite] balun could negate any gain you may get by impedance matching. It is also fixed, while a coax stub can be easily 'retuned' by simply pinning the coax. Not only that, since the antenna is (hopefully) way up in the air, the coax used for matching is either incorporated in the line or hung from the side, making any worries about extra coax "kicking around" a non-issue. You should be more worried about where you're going to put that nine square feet of ground plane.

Baluns and RF transformers can be loss. Many factors come into effect.
These include wire guage, operating frequency, power levels, load and source vriations and core material. Also not to forget connetor losses.

A well designed Balun or RF transformer will comparable low loss performance of a coaxial matching section. There are some benefits for RF transformers and baluns in that they are considerably more broadbanded. Over narrow bandwidths the coaxial matching section can be more tolerable to impedance variation from both the load and the source.

2:1 RF transformers can be a tricky item to build. IF you use air core you need sufficient inductance in both the primary and and secondary.
Our amatuer radio club did a 40 M and 80 M full wave loop for Field Day about 20 yrs ago and used air core RF transformers. They were rather large and the windings required support. They worked very well.
We were making contacts when otheres were complaining how poor the bands were.

Good luck on which direction you choose.

ps. If you plan to add a reflector to the system then I would suggest other methods of matching than a balun or RF transformer. With a reflector, a gamma match would be suitable. So temper that with your decision for future expansion.

If I hook it up without a balun, I would get a 2:1 SWR. I guess I can lower it slightly to 1.5 to 1.7 with someof that 75 ohm coax. I only use the center conductor when using that method?

I dunno man, you may be throwing in the towel too soon. I expect it to be a good series. If the Nets hit the outside stuff lookout.

2866. U.S. callbooks from around 1980?

Around 1980 (possibly earlier) I had a U.S. CB callsign. I've long since lost the actual license. I was wondering if there were ever CB callbooks from that era and one could find them online.

I know that it is no longer necessary to have a license, I just wanted to find out what it was.

Thanks, Geoff.

Reason Imus got fired is that the 1st amendment that says we have free speech is conditional. So that's why. The networks were afraid that the Basketball team would sue them it they didn't due anything.
Don Imus reminds me of Bill O'Reilly and the other Republicraps on Fox News.

Imus got what people thought he deserved. If the 1st amendment for freedom of speech was true he couldn't get fired for what he said.
Yes I believe that if he would have been african american he would still have his job. They can say anything they want about each other.
But if a white person says the same thing they say it's racist.
He shouldn't have said what he did.

Mark. Having given some serious thought concerning the registration of Gav's call sign to be used as a blog, I must admit that this was a transgression that was almost completely uncalled for. Almost.
It was mean, yes. It was done with forethought, yes. It was calculated and carried out after I read a comment on the ipunce blog from a user who identified himself as "Tex". In fact, Mark, had you been a bit more on the ball you would have seen this comment and you could have beat me to the punce. It was not my fault. I just did that which "Tex" suggested.

My conscience is getting the better of me on this one, Mark. I should not have done what I did, even to a jerk such as yourself and even though I had a right to do so. Mea Culpa, Mea Culpa, Mea Maxima Culpa.

With this in mind, and the fact that I can't sleep peacefully knowing that I have trespassed on hallowed Mark Morgan ground, I will posit a simple offer.

If you cease hijacking posts/topics for a thirty day period beginning today, I will delete the blog and will give every consideration toward relinquishing the aforementioned blog to your control. After all, I have no use for it.

And since I am feeling somewhat generous, I might even do likewise with the gavmorgan blog, but also not without stipulations.

If you cease your countless posts, say keeping them to five or six per day, accusing Dloyd of being a "theif" and if you do so for the same aforementioned 30 day period, I will be more than amenable concerning handing the gavmorgan blog over to your control, too. Of course this stipulation does not require that you cease picking on Roger, since to ask such would be far to unrealistic.

The blog(s) is in your court. It is now up to you to govern yourself accordingly should you wish to gain control of same.

Years ago there was a professional tennis team in the NY area called the Sets. Basketball is hard to watch as players are getting taller and the basket remains the same height. Try English Footie (soccer). Great entertainment. Not as boring as one might think. The season is just about over and Manchester Utd are champs. HooYa...

I just purchase from Gi Joes the Galaxy DX949. My question is has any one bought a radio from them that was tuned up? I got it with it but now I'm wondering if it is worth the $40.00 price to have it done. Overall with that done and all it ran the price up to $195.95. Do you think it is still a good deal with the work and all? It was shipped today I hope it was.

Dalton was a pro ball player for the Phillies (I think, I'm not much of a baseball fan). He lives around here and can often be found in a certain local bar talking about how the world is going to end in 2012 and how the aliens were in command of his body when he hit home runs. Well, as far as I'm concerned, his beliefs aren't any kookier than having faith in some monotheistic derivative of ancient mythology.

In case anyone is wondering what we're talking about, the ancient Mayan calender ends on Dec. 21, 2012. On that day a VERY rare alignment takes place between the Earth, the moon, and the center of the galaxy. Very cool, but nothing to lose sleep over. The Mayans thought different, tho.

The Mayan prophecy is based on what can be summarized as an advanced form of astrology; at some point on or around that date, the world will undergo a cataclysmic change, possibly resulting in the end of civilization. But like any other form of astrology, it's based on nothing more than the ramblings of social misfits who have nothing better to do than manipulate the ignorant.

The problem today (in this "enlightened" society) is that the current state of world affairs is terrible and getting worse. By 2012 it may not take very much to push the whole kit-&-kaboodle right over the edge. That extra push could very well be caused by the mere belief (by gullible people) in the Mayan prophecy. After all, it doesn't take some mystical force to cause a civilation to collapse..... it just takes enough people who believe it will.

Hopefully people will wise up between now and then.

I think part of the appeal of the HAM community is that it is 'cleaner' (more sophisticated). A lot of CBers jumped to HAM radio because of the stuff on CB radio. However, I have to admit, the whole fun of listening to CB is channel 19, if you know what I mean ;))))) Anyway, you're not going to get an unlicensed CB radio community to "stop swearing". Ain't gonna happen, no matter how hard you try. However, if you are a CBer, and don't like swearing, you can make a personal choice to stop swearing if you don't like it.

They have been swearing on the CB since the 70's. The worst sounds I heard on the CB back in the 70's was some dude on the radio causing and before his signal went off the air you heard an explosion. Then another time some dude was agitating truckers. During one of his transmissions you could hear gunshots in the background and him cussing up a storm. I guess it does not pay to have your radio room in the front room or front bedroom if you are an agitator.

Then there was the guy who fell asleep at the radio and his head or hand laid on the push to talk button. For hours all you could hear was the dude snoring.

More Markie lies.....Marqueer has repeatedly changed his story and claims all Roger has to do is show up at his shitty trailer in Chassell.

Nope, you claimed you can't leave your daddy alone that long. Now you have changed your story several times, and backpedaled, because nobody fell for your stupid ploy.

Just like Worqueer changes his stalking, Worqueer, you spend so much time on the internet, at least 8 hours per day, maybe SSA would like to know about your abililty to sustain activity for at least 8 hours per day, 40+ hours per week, you can go get a job when they cut off your check.

Why are you answering for Wiseman, Un-Wiseman? Apparently you know him intimately.
And you really should get some new material. You've plagiarized everybody else's to the point of boring repetition. Originality mixed with humor is

This was e-mailed to me this morning by Oris Grim an old friend.

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I deceided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Hello Steveo:

Yeah thats a big Ten-4! Was listening in on Ten and 27.385 LSB hearing the same locations slamming in.

Getting ready to throw a 30 foot Boom 4 element quad up, cut for 27.385 Mc.

I was thinking of a nice big amp built around the Eimac X2159. But then that would require a healthy power station to go with it.
Couldn't operate it in the city though. Have to be out in the farm lands as to not over dose the neighbors with RF radiation.

I always liked any tube that had dual filaments and required 25KW just to light up the filaments. Just imagine an amp with 15KV on the plates with 750 amps peak current.

Can you hear me now?!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Roger has been posting that five year old alleged email for years now. When he has nothing to say about current affairs, he resorts to the old stuff in an effort to dodge the topic du jour.

Mine too. Yestiddy I was funning around from the mobile and talking to Chi town on 38 low when my cell rang. It was my bud that moved to the Motor City a few years ago. He told me my favorite no code alcoholic was out there carrying on sounding like he was about to give birth after hearing me. Pity I couldn't hear him. I drove home and pointed the ears north but by the time I made it through traffic, the activity dissipated.

A follow-up to the earlier thread.

I won. It took five months, but I won.

Stick to your guns, do exactly what your credit card company tells you when disputing the charges, and Copper will have to eat it if you've done your due diligence. And don't listen to anyone here who tells you anything different.

CBers aren't intelligent enough to use a speech processor. They will crank it up to max and think because they get more "swang" on the meter they have a bigger signal, when all it accomplishes is splatter over the rf spectrum.

I got a galaxy dx 949 with a wilson 500 antenna. The swr is at 1.3-1.5. When on ssb the warning light for swr glows brighter as you talk into the microphone. On regular am it don't do this. What is it that could cause this? I've got both the stock mike as well as a red devil power microphone but they both are doing the same. Any ideas? The built in meter on it is showing that in fact the swr dose increase as you talk on ssb. But the swr decreases on am when you speak. Is this normal or does it need fixed.

Don't put too much confidence into any built in SWR meter or dummy light. The best thing to do is to attach a decent watt meter such as a bird or coaxial dynamics and take actual forward and reflective watt readings to calculate true SWR to ensure the accuracy of the built in meter. Nevertheless, if you are confident that the built in meter is fairly accurate, I would say that the circuitry driving the warning lamp is probably out of adjustment. There probably is an adjustment in the circuit to set the threshold when the light comes on. Should be easy to find on the schematic.

Right. You're the guy who "does radio for a living" but doesn't "have time to chase down problems on a simple receiver." You also stated you spoke to a Northpoint technician but are unable to provide contact information for the (imaginary) tech.

I think you have your own half-business and either can't compete or are losing customers. Happens all the time in this industry and it used to be standard practice in this group for radio techs to come in here and slam the dealer taking away their business. Even those moved to create Web pages concerning their personal poor experiences with a company usually do not do so in anonymity. Anonymous, internet complaints against businesses carry no juice.

Right. You're the guy who "does radio for a living" but doesn't "have time to chase down problems on a simple receiver." You also stated you spoke to a Northpoint technician but are unable to provide contact information for the (imaginary) tech.

I think you have your own half-business and either can't compete or are losing customers. Happens all the time in this industry and it used to be standard practice in this group for radio techs to come in here and slam the dealer taking away their business. Even those moved to create Web pages concerning their personal poor experiences with a company usually do not do so in anonymity. Anonymous, internet complaints against businesses carry no juice.

Gavy say's he has some juice for you!

Yes that is what I was told by Gi Joes. They said it was ok to just ignore it. Every one sais it sounds fine. I appreciate what you said, I think I may go ahead and put my stand alone swr meter on it just to see what it will show. Just to see if the two meters agree.

I enjoy doing my talk show. I enjoy the Radio hobby. My interests in Ham Radio are kinda a "escape" from my own personal hell.

I will be 33 years old in less than a month. I look at my life as a life that has been a lonely one.

I enjoy the "attention" I get from doing my shows and my posts calling myself a time lord. I suffer from depression alot of the time.

Just please try to understand me. That is all.

Nonsense. You ain't Lloyd, and you ain't Mark Morgan. Anyone who can read headers can see where you have screwed up in your attempts to impersonate each of them.

You seem to be obsessed with Lloyd; you seem to be in need of help.

Cheers Sharkie. The piping plovers are on the beach so no 4 wheeling until they leave. Great year for flounder, fluke, blues and weakfish so far for the boaters. Being a surfcaster its been a little sparse but its better than being at work flying a desk. 73, Jim

If you have a virus you should reschedule your exam session. There's enough STD's in the amateur radio community.

Hello there....try this.

DX 949 and DX 959 SWR ALERT SYMPTOM:
SWR ALERT LED stays on when SWR is below 3:1
PROBLEM:
Q1 on SWR PC board is too sensitive SOLUTION:
Replace C5 with a 22K ohm 1/4 watt resistor

This was copied from the / Galaxy website. Cheers from Australia.

From: BW <winstead@airmail.net>
Message-ID: <1179789716.398493.191040@y2g2000prf.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 231052
Cross-posted to: rec.radio.cb,rec.radio.swap

This professionally improved Realistic HTX-100 Amateur Radio Transceiver is a close cousin to the Uniden HR-2510 and HR-2600 amateur radios. Frequency range has been extended to cover 26.000 Mhz through 30.000 Mhz. The CW function eliminated in order to add Lower Sideband capability to the existing Upper Sideband function. Microphone gain slightly opened and output power increased to +/- 35 watts. Fun radio to listen to international DX pirate stations near 27.555 USB and the old standbys on CB channels 36 to 40 (27.365 to 27.405). This radio is in beautiful condition and includes original microphone, power cord and a copy of the owner's manual. $125 shipped in the USA. Will ship worldwide with buyer paying shipping costs. PayPal or Postal Money Order only.

Thats right Steveo. I went to Visalia California DX Convention, all the ham guys wanted to be loud also. I helped quit a few out there. Most the amature antenns stuff will only take a little over a few grand.

I still got a big kick out of the last Shoot Out I went to. Got free home made wine, BBQ Ribs, Beans, 4 gauge wires with with crimped on Lugs, two offers for marriage, and helped a guy run a ground wire to his amp from 3 Leech Naville Alternators. Got shown how 1 5/8 coax connetors are put on!

We all had a great me.

Niggermanica are often accused of being "racists" full of "hate" towards niggers and nothing could be further from the truth. The webmassas of NIGGERmania don't hate niggers we understand niggers.

As Max Rainbeer once said "Niggermania is the one stop shop of all things jiggaboo." Niggermania is the one place on the web where the "nigger" is not only used but is encouraged.

N8WWM Named To CQ Amateur Radio Hall of Fame

(May 22, 2007) - N8WWM was selected as an inductee to the 2007 CQ Amateur Radio Hall of Fame. As a tireless opponent of sissy keyclowns, N8WWM has been responsible for the past decade for keeping the amateur community free from creeping keyclownism.

Upon the announcement, QST Editor Steve Ford, WB8IMY, said, "In a remarkably short time, N8WWM became the most feared name among gay illegal CB operators." ARRL Chief Operating Officer Harold Kramer, WJ1B, said, "N8WWM has been the voice of the ARRL in matters of keyclownism. He has been especially effective at stopping the spread of illegal CB amplifiers on eBay."

The CQ Amateur Radio Hall of Fame honors individuals who: 1) Whether licensed hams or not, have made significant contributions to Amateur Radio; and/or 2) As licensed amateurs, have made significant contributions either to Amateur Radio, to their professional careers or to some other aspect of life on our planet.

-scared Dweebo from NG
-stopped amp sales
-ID'd Tra1n and PeePeeHolic as federal criminals
-keeps Twithed off NG on weekends
-shut down Cranus The Anus
-adored by keysissies across USA
-put boot up ass of Brainlessbluster
-ID'd MoparhoLICK's name and location

Hey keyclownz...jump up and down some more!!!!!!

Thank you sweet little femininists for being so trainable. It is so much fun to rat out auctions and then come here and let you know who did it. It is always a pleasure to bust keyclowns, so keep posting auctions.
Also, keep ranting and insulting the AKC members. It is a great measure of success to see the big mouths on here running their soup coolers about us, we appreciate it. Our fame is enhanced by your hatred. Thank you.

Are you having fun at the Petro yet, mopeadope? Well enough is when AKC says so, not you. Wake up. You think your bull* matters? If bull* from you was money you could buy the planet Jupiter and have it delivered. You are just another keyclown who can't take it when someone makes you cwy.

AKC flips a switch and you turn on and flap your wings like a penguin in bondage. Flap 'em, Flap 'em, wazoo lips...Good boy, good little wazoo lips.

Signed,

AKC Command and Control Center

That asshat seems to have lost it again. Kathy left him alone to self destruct in his roach motel slum.

I plonked him months ago.

He wouldn't come outside when I knocked on his door in Toledo, he pointed a BB gun at me instead. (i pointed and laughed at him) <---- hahahahaha

He's really not worth anyones attention, he never was.

Felon-N8WWM hides behind his monitor waiting for his next mental dis-ability check.

If he don't like being called on the carpet for being the loser that he is he can meet me anyplace in Ohio to discuss it, including his front porch.

Enuff about that N8WWM assclown. (sorry)

Twitheds obsession with Leland.......starting with accusing him of child molestation, and posting and emailing his phone number with intent to harass. Soon Twisted is off the deep end accusing Leland of everything under the sun. Keyqueens of the newsgroup, skeered and frightened, begged him to stop. Too late for Twisteds mind snapped. Mr. Twithed has succumbed to his own half-baked and deluded theories about who is doing what to whom. It has been a pitiable, laughable spectacle, and one that we have enjoyed immensely. *But the time has come for Twithed to apologize to Leland!!!!!

So tell the group how you mounted Doug's jock strap above your mantle. Other people mount deer head and so on there, that I can understand, but a jock strap, now that is Twisted! You really must like it a lot after all you did ?say "hangs proudly above my mantle".

An FRS radio worked for a stranded climber on Mt. Rainier -- and he got out over 60 miles. Most FRS radios have a scan feature that will check all of the channels. And when the receive is set for no privacy codes it will receive a transmission regardless of whether it has a privacy code or not. Regardless, your troop can have a rule that channel x will be their emergency channel.

>And it is good until your batteries go dead... Pretty sketchy.

If you limit your transmissions to once every half hour the batteries will last all day. And you can always carry some backups. It's not like they don't already have batteries for their gameboys and flashlights.

As far as power and range are concerned, you don't need that much power. If you have a radio with a range of 1 mile, and a search party is scouring the woods, the radio is going to be heard. Also, four times the power will only double your range, yet will drain the batteries four times faster. And more people (searchers) are likely to have FRS radios instead of GMRS because they have been on the market longer, and because most people don't ignore federal law (which, of course, is not something you want to teach your young Scouts, do you?)

FRS is the better choice.

Soon, AKC Productions will unveil the FREE CD of moparhoLICK's GREATEST LICKS!

That's right people, truckers far and wide who have shelled out 25 cents to sample moparhoLICK's talents at the Petro toilet in Girard, Ohio will give their critiques of his abilities!

Here's a little teaser...print doesn't do it justice, but just wait 'til you hear the FREE CD!

Yes, keyclown, you are well trained. We see you have asked obediently regarding how you may please the AKC. We will give you an answer. Try to focus your tiny brain on these instructions. Get a garden hose and attach it to your anus. Turn the water on full. Wait 30 minutes. Then remove the hose, insert the coax lead from your keyclown amplifier, and key down.

You'd think after how many years of this same old BS they would tire of it!

I hope you all got in some of that skip Tuesday night. I was having a blast on 10 meters. I even did FM simplex to Illinois! I've been checking the last two nights for another dose of that, but the Momma has other ideas...

Got the whole three day weekend coming up. If skip happens, I'm 104 in Baltimore on 11 meters and you just have to know on 10! :)

Stupid is, Stupid does Scott. Doug is and always will be that.................Stupid!!!
I would, but I'm on my way down to Houston today for the weekend visiting family,
so I'll take you up on it next time ;)

Have a great weekend, be safe!!!!

LOL!!!! I'm only a Ford guy because that's what I own at present. But I started out with 3 Camaro's and a couple of Chevy pick-ups, so I'm real partial to the 67/68 Camaro's.

LOL!!! I went to Tahoe a couple of weekends ago with my son, was going to do a little fishing. But of course crazy weather: Left work 70 degrees, got part of the way there, rain, heading over the summit, snow, otherside of summit, hail, rain again, go to Tahoe, windy & snow. So needless to say, didn't do any lake fishing.

Good circuit, a good audio alc, not a clipper.
Now the only problem is AD stopped the production on the main chip SSM2166S.
I use it also and my audio boards sre on hold. Does anybody have 5 of them.

Not so. Woger is not speaking on 14.275. Yes, Woger is indeed a "sorry ass" but he lives in fear of RH. Woger may be a dolt, but he knows enough to not tempt the sword of Riley. Roger has thrice encountered the wrath of Riley and was forced to do a retest to keep his Ham license. Roger and Riley are on a first-name basis.
Tolassi is an altogether different study. David walks the fine line and is very much aware that he is being monitored. Roger refuses to enter into a QSO. He prefers to hide. David, on the other hand, is out front and "in your face". I enjoy listening to Tolassi. I further enjoy hearing the disgruntled Hams who try to disrupt his transmissions with their (illegal) maliciousness.
Take Tolassi with a grain of salt, guys. Enjoy the humor he provides. I'd much rather listen to him than that old Blowhard, Rich Whiten, who plagued the bands with his illegally powered amps and his racist comments.

Bottom line. Don't like listening to David? Go to another frequency. How simple is that?

I'll be "ear"ing it about 13:45 to 14:00 EDT.
Got a net I need to be on at 13:00. I haven't heard much since Tuesday night. I heard MO last night. The A index is very high but that shouldn't affect 10 meters much.

Use SSM2166SZ, the SSM2188S is not RoHS compliant. Most IC vendors are did I, gues you se it diferently

I do saying passing messages in the mname of someone else on USENET is sign that the poster does indeed lack a life of his own

Steveo;

You really can't seem to restrain yourself. As much as I hate to say so but who ever is posting this stuff is right, they seem to have gotten your goat and they have you dancing to their tune. If you really want to show people how macho you are then just ignore it. A real man shouldn't feel threatened by some gay postings directed to them.

If you don't want to appear "gay" then you really shouldn't write crap like this. Besides the poster is jerking your chain and you play along, gee, wise up guy.

Steveo;

I don't have any idea who is doing what on this news group any more. I've got better things to do then chase around fake headers like Twisted. Once you learn more about how the system works you come to realize the average person doesn't have the tools and resources to have a chance against the smart guys faking messages. Look at this one for example.

Anyway I find it funny that you expend so much time and effort chasing those posters around; about the only thing they haven't done is put a dog collar around you neck with a chain attached. They've done a good job of leading you around by the nose, and the sad part is this couldn't happen without your full cooperation - jumping at every post they make about you.

look, moparhoLICK is tracing mens' routes....because he wants to be facing mens' ROOTS!

moparhoLICK can't stop the AKC, and he is all wound up about it. how does it FEEL to be useless at stopping something you just hate??

go on, nymboi...flip your wrist some more...that's ALL you can do...HAHAHHAHAAHAHAHAH!

The prices are by far lower than any other dealers. I cant beleive the pricing! It looks too good to be true also with free delivery - has anyone used them? Are they any good?

The forums look interesting but not much traffic. Apparrently they have just redone the site?
Anyone been to the shop?

I have no link to them - I found them as they advertise on another forum and another website www.cobraworxshopz.com and www.ukradiodx.com

Also a regular on the 19 was talking about www.fusionrf.co.uk www.cobraworxshopz.com and also www.ukradiodx.com. Ukradiodx.com is where you can listen to the 19 from London on the internet

Hopefully with these websites that are starting up - it will get the interest back again on CB?

Do you think it will ever get back to what it was? Probably not :(

We will thoroughly review the listing(s) you have reported for violations of our Electronics Equipment Policy. We often rely on members
like you bring such items to our attention.

In light of eBay's privacy policy, we cannot share with you any action taken by eBay with respect to this listing. If we determine that the listing violates eBay policy, we may:

1. Send the seller an informational alert;
2. Remove the listing; or
3. Suspend the seller.

Account suspensions are usually reserved for those sellers that continuously disregard policy.

For more information on our Electronics Equipment Policy, please

it certainly could but simply policing the sign up and lsitening to complaints about posters would solve much of the problem sure I can I can even win the problem is not that finding a target that also pay the judgement

but is it stiring the things to go around calling your foes child molestors and rapists and such . I don't do that indeed I am brave to sign my name to stuff you are not

nobody deserves to be called a child molestor not even a real child molestor (those sick folks deserve a long quiet rest and such peace as their misdeeds allow them)

not even you Tom deserve being called a child molestor

Mark, Just ignore them.

They only tease you because of the stupid things you say when you follow up. Just ignore them and they'll give up.

Stop giving them reasons to tease you. It only makes you look more stupid.

Take a break from the radio groups for a while, Maybe work on your moon bounce some more.

Combine this radio with any ol' 10/11 Meter antenna and listen to the world come alive! This Model 3837 Sears Roadtalker Transceiver has the built-in AC power supply for plug'n'play base operation as well as the 13.8VDC option. Extremely nice condition rig that ranges from 28.300 to 28.745 MHz with clarifier that works in both transmit and receive modes. 25 watt PEP input power and digital display. Includes original microphone, owner's manual, AC and DC power cords, mounting bracket and conversion data. $65 shipped in the USA. Will ship worldwide with buyer paying shipping costs. PayPal or Postal Money Order only.

3335. FS: Realistic HTX-100 10 Meter Transceiver - $95 Shipped

This professionally improved Realistic HTX-100 Amateur Radio Transceiver is a close cousin to the Uniden HR-2510 and HR-2600 amateur radios. Frequency range has been extended to cover 26.000 Mhz through 30.000 Mhz. The CW function eliminated in order to add Lower Sideband capability to the existing Upper Sideband function. Microphone gain slightly opened and output power increased to +/- 35 watts. Fun radio to listen to international DX pirate stations near 27.555 USB and the old standbys on CB channels 36 to 40 (27.365 to 27.405). This radio is in beautiful condition and includes original microphone, power cord and a copy of the owner's manual. $95 shipped in the USA. Will ship worldwide with buyer paying shipping costs. PayPal or Postal Money Order only.

You need to bone-up on the rules there sport. Hams can and do build/modify gear to use on the ham bands. This is a perfectly LEGAL radio for 10 and 12 meters. My Icom 746 covers the 11-meter band...is it illegal too? Idiot.

Not trying to speak out of turn, but....

It's handy to be able to transmit "out of bounds" when feeding a transverter, say a 20M to 6M, or 2M to 2.4GHz and the like.
The problem is trying not to overpower the silly things.

If you want to use 60 meters on an older radio you have to do the MARS/CAP mod and that gives you full capability to go anywhere.

It appears to be advertised as a 10 meter radio. CB is 11 meters. Also, the stated frequency ranges, 28.300 to 28.745MHz, are completely outside of the CB (11 meter) band. It'd appear to me that this is a completely legal unit for use on the Amateur Radio 10 meter band. Not legal for CB use, but then again, from the description, the unit is not able to operate on the 27 MHz band in its current configuration.

Only illegal if used to transmit outside of the 10 meter bands. It's perfectly legal to modify a radio to listen on any band. If such modification inherently causes transmit capabilities to be added on unauthorized bands, it is the responsibility of the operator NOT to operate on those bands for which the transmitting section is not authorized. In summary, the radio is perfectly legal for use on the Amateur Radio 10 meter band. It is perfectly legal for monitoring (listening) on the 11 meter CB bands, and on the "pirate" bands. It is NOT legal to use as a transmitter on any frequency outside of the Amateur Radio 10 meter band.

I suggest that you Google "Life", and then locate a site from which you can download one.

Hi all, just to let you all know , we have setup a Cb Radio gateway here in Western Australia.
No license is requiered to use it. By using a small program called eQSO446 Client, you can log on to the server and speak with people on the CB radio that is in range of the gateway.
Also you can speak with others that are on the server.
Maybe someone can setup a few links into the USA, we have numerous links to the rest of the world but none to the US.
You can download the software from this link http://palmbeach.dynalias.com/gateway.htm
I have had a few people login from the US but would like a few more English speaking people on.
You can also get more information from the main eQSO446 Server from here
http://446user.co.uk

Cheers all from Russ and Giday from downunder

My uncle has a farm. He violates Lev 19:19 by planting two different crops in the same field, as does his wife by wearing garments made of two different kinds of thread (cotton/polyester blend). He also tends to curse and blaspheme a lot. Is it really necessary that we go to all the trouble of getting the whole town together to stone them? (Lev 24:10-16) Couldn't we just burn them to death at a private family affair like we do with people who sleep with their in-laws? (Lev.
20:14)

no.
it appears to have been entirely converted to the 10 meter band (overlapping the tech and part of the general clas sections).

I also know the technical specs on this radio. it will work across 600 Khz quite well, but anything outside of that isn't doable (the circuitry is far too tight to allow for wide bandwidth)

anyway, the short answer is no.

Do you all honestly think anyone cares anymore about modifiying a Ham rig to gain access to a totally worthless frequency spectrum?

BTW last time I checked, none of the Radio Shack rigs were modifyable to the 11 meter band. The microprocessor prevented mods to go outside of the band.

If you want to get on 11m so bad, get yourself a codeless geek license and get on Amateur Radio 2m band with the rest of the tribe.

Yes. Many do. In fact, there are Internet forums dedicated to nothing but modifications of these types.

The spectrum is extremely valuable which is why it's pseudo-protected and regulated. The band has the same properties as 10 meters and the crowds on these bands illustrate your position is the extreme minority.

Amateur radio is not necessary for 11 meter. Modified cb radios and export radios provide all the access one may require for that band.

douGAY and Lelnad were a couple of pals
They got high and smoked pot
Ate pizza at Sal's
Then tied each other up with a sailor's knot
douGAY and Lelnad weren't too bright
It was one tight noose
They were stuck all night
Couldn't get loose
Until daylight
Yippy and Skippy had nothing to fear
They both knew each other were queer

The point is the only reason that was posted was to express the fact that moparhoLICK is frustrated because he cannot have gay sex with a ham. He could look up lambda members and maybe get lucky, but lambda and nambla both threw him out cuz he is TOO gay. That queen is so gay he has to use goo gone for toothpaste.

All of these posts originate from les(bian) moparhoLICK.

YAWNNNNNNNNN.....ZZZZZzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzz

Oh now Eric, please reference the official "Rule" that says this again. We went around & around the last time, because you said "an official" told me. Well if a senator tells you "it's not legal to wear green t shirts", but no reference to a particular law stating just that "it's not legal to wear green t shirts", then it's just that, some thing
someone said with no validity.
The last time you posted a link where it clearly stated that "you could not transmit",
nothing about owning, modifying & listening to those freqs. on a modified radio.
You then came up with "I spoke with a "person that works for the FCC" LMAO!!!!

Again, practice you're arm chair lawyer tactics with another group, it doesn't work
here.

I just saw the message about skip rolling. We are about to get a t-storm so I came in to wait it out. Typical Baltimore weather. Whenever something happens, it's cloudy. I can't ever see any of the neat stuff they tell us about on www.spaceweather.com . If aurora should happen, it's cloudy. If an eclipse should happen, it's cloudy. If there's a meteor shower, it's f*cking cloudy! If skip rolls, we get t-storms! Dammit!!

Or it's nice all week and the weekend is either rainy or too hot and sticky to enjoy.

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out!

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

And it came to pass in the Shire of Mistig Waetru, Lady Avagaye bas Ysaac, a portly, hideous creature, but with a powerful ladystick, did send the order that all transgressors must be dealt with harshly by whining them to death. Avagay did send the only representative of her court, the court jester/fool to try to handle this task, Morkie of Moronia. So, the first order of business was for Morkie to quaff a few pints down at Ye Greenlight, and that didn't mean he enjoyed the mead.

Morkie stumbled back to the "castle" past the moat of junk outside (to protect from "invaders" like the many rats and roaches) and logged onto the internet. Morkie stood guard online and waited until some of his incoherent posts were answered. Morkie used his abnormal functioning brain to post nonsense, he never admits his mistakes, no matter how wrong he is, the correct procedure as outlined by Avagay when questioned is to LIE and then provide follow up responses that are so butchered and misspelled, that you will have effectively covered your rear by causing any inquirer to just give up out of frustration trying to decode your jumbling of words. However, if you fail, slowly backpedal over time but never admit fault, then when they are not expecting it, go on a tirade about something unimportant but extrapolate it into something outlandish. Like claiming victory when you clearly get your dumbass handed to you as Morkie does quite often. Morkie can then go back and report to Avagay, who handles the finances and has to clear everything Morkie does, who proceeds to reward Morkie by rear entry of her ladystick. Such is the life in the Shire of Mistig Waertu.

Site one rule saying that it would be "illegal" for me as a duly licensed ham, saying I can not own this particular radio. You can't and you know it.

You have not shown one fact, only innuendo's that you spoke with someone from the FCC.

I wasn't bothering you, I was calling you on your claims that it was illegal to own to which you can not back up, big difference. You made the claim first time, sighting rules to which you could not produce. You then went to say there were hundreds of case to that fact, to which you could not produce one case. Frank pointed that very fact out and you started posting that you spoke with an FCC official.
All in all Eric, you are wrong and it is you that has his head buried in the sand.

You seem more familiar with using blow up dolls, lend him one of yours. You are so used to dating your hand anyways.
In fact Pink wrote this song after meeting you!:

U + Ur Hand (Pink)

Uh uh uh uh uh uh uh oh
Uh uh uh uh uh uh uh oh
Check it out
Going out
On the late night
Looking tight
Feeling nice
It's a cock fight
I can tell
I just know
That it's going down
Tonight
At the door we don't wait cause we know them
At the bar six shots just beginning
That's when dickhead put his hands on me
But you see

I'm not here for your entertainment
You don't really want to mess with me tonight
Just stop and take a second
I was fine before you walked into my life

Cause you know it's over
Before it begins
Keep your drink just give me the money
It's just you and your hand tonight

Uh uh uh uh uh uh uh oh
Uh uh uh uh uh uh uh oh

Midnight
I'm drunk
I don't give a fuck
Wanna dance
By myself
Guess you're outta luck
Don't touch
Back up
I'm not the one
Buh bye
Listen up it's just not happening
You can say what you want to your boyfriends
Just let me have my fun tonight
Alright

I'm not here for your entertainment
You don't really want to mess with me tonight
Just stop and take a second
I was fine before you walked into my life
Cause you know it's over
Before it begins
Keep your drink just give me the money
It's just you and your hand tonight

Break break
Break it down

In the corner with your boys you bet up five bucks
To get the girl that just walked in but she thinks you suck
We didn't get all dressed up just for you to see
So quit spilling your drinks on me yeah

You know who you are High fivin, talkin shit, but you're going home alone aren't cha?

Cause I'm not here for your entertainment
No
You don't really want to mess with me tonight
Just stop and take a second
Just stop and take a second
I was fine before you walked into my life
Cause you know it's over
Know it's over

Before it begins

You're a sorry excuse Twisted.You have demonstrated your ineptitude in this area beyond a shadow of a doubt by the shear volume of "Twisted" and meaning less boasts. As a matter of fact you are yourself guilty as original sin for posting forged messages to various news groups, using other peoples screen names, while claiming you did no such thing. It's time for you to acknowledge your wrongful deeds, and make amends for your sins.

It's a fact that you have forged posts in various news groups. I'm very sure that other innocence victims of your agenda of "Twisted" vengeance will agree with this point. How many do you think would like to come forward just to see you get a sample of your own "Twisted" sense of justice? You went well past that point long ago with your perverted and "Twisted" holy crusade of proclaiming conspiracies everywhere. It was even pointed out to you countless times, by some of your now former compatriots, how your "Twisted" logic and ignorance betrayed you. You didn't listen to them, but instead you claimed they were a part of the vast and imaginary conspiracy against you. ow if the story about the jock strap is false then Twisted is caught in another lie. Either way he looks like a mentally disturbed clown on one hand, that talks to "saucer men" and uses "jock straps" to decorate his domicile, or a pathological liar. He dug himself a hole he can't get out of with that story. Your insanity took control, and you proceeded to vomit forth your hate in a deluge of "Twisted" incoherent postings on this news group. Your distinctive "Twisted" writing style can't be denied, and the "Twisted" motivation for the posts is most evident. You even try to deny your own "Twisted" thoughts on the subjects. You can't even remember your own "Twisted" prose, much less your lies anymore.

Your CB compatriots on this news group have deserted you, Hams despise you, and others that visit this news group think of you, and your "Twisted" incoherent prose, as nothing more than a circus act side show, only good for a few laughs. If it's not some group pulling your strings, where upon you perform right on cue with gusto, or others tripping you up on your "Twisted" lies, all with the entertainment at your expense never stops. The only thing remaining for your last performance is to make that short eight-foot drop through the trap door, because you have really reached the end of your rope, and make that final "Twisted" half turn to the right. It's the only right thing left for you to do, and you earned it too.

Hello Jay

It has been open S9 with some of those swamp stations ringing my bell up here the last few weeks. I enjoy it except for it sometimes makes it tuff to talk to the local buds. We have the freeband for that if it gets real busy.

Dumbass, reading comprehension is not your strong suit. I never quoted the above. I disputed that anything that can talk on 11 meters, is an illegally modified radio. My Icom doesn't distinguish the difference when I pulled the diode. So even though mine can talk on 11 meters, it is not a legally modifed radio.

As far as the HTX, I don't know if this particular one can talk on 11, and I don't even know the mod for it. But if the mod can get 12 meters too, then it's a perfectly legal mod.

No stick that up your ass.

Hello All:

Hearing skip on CB Channel 36, 37, 38, and 39 LSB. Also hearing the same skip locations on 10 meters with the no code techs, generals, and Extras.

They seem to be centered around 28.400 USB, so tune around there and join in.

Hello Barry:

Most all of the ham amps have two 110 Volt AC windings in the power transformer. These two seperate windings are wired in seriers like two batteries in a flashlight. This series connection allows for the 220 Volt AC use.

The two seperate windings can also be wired for 110 Volt AC use. They need to be wired in paralell. This is not a terribable hard thing to do. I am sure the operators manual will show how both the 220 and 110 connections are made. Manuals can be bought off the internet, just type in Dentron Clipperton into www.Google.com

Hope this helps

Hello Barry: again...

Go to the CB Tricks web site at:
http://www.cbtricks.com/Amp/dentron/clipperton_l/index.htm

You find will a diagram showing how to wire the amp for 110 Volt use. If this is out of your technical league I would have a technician do it for you. Remember this amp uses high voltages that can and have killed.

Yes, I am not Doug I am an AKC member from Oakland. I am doing the important work of ratting out keyclown auctions, but I have a question. Why are keyclowns so gay? Is the gayness born into them or does the RF coming out at 27 mhz at illegal power create wrist flipping and Petro whoring by keyclowns?

Keyclownism is fun to watch. Sociopathic though it may be, it does afford AKC great amusement. An AKC can say..."Watch this, I'll post this message and MoparhoLICK will come back with a response."

Surely enough, keyclowns such as MoparhoLICK respond as programmed 100% of the time, demonstrating the total control the AKC has over them. This is a source of endless amusement to the AKC, as even when keyclowns are told what is being done to them and for what reason, they STILL respond as programmed by the AKC.

The AKC see every reason to believe that this will never cease, and that future generations of keyclowns will also respond as programmed by future generations of AKC.

The Road-King 56 (RK-56) Dynamic Microphone is designed for voice communications applications requiring a rugged, hand-held microphone. Its noise-canceling design makes it particularly effective for use in noisy locations, and its excellent voice response characteristics make it a good choice in quiet areas as well. The RK-56 uses dynamic, differential type cartridge which discriminates against sounds greater than &#65533;-inch (12 mm) away. A non-marking lip guard assures the user of correct microphone-to-mouth positioning. Best noise cancellation is achieved with the edge of the lip guard just touching the upper lip. The push-to talk switch is located on the top of the microphone housing. The RK-56 is equipped with a six-conductor, black coiled cord which is relieved at the microphone housing by a telephone type strain relief grommet. The cord may be wired for either relay or electronic switching. Digital picture avail.

You need to be able to see the audio waveform. If you can stretch it out enough to see the RF waveform, you can "see" harmonics if it's not a perfect sine wave. Every complex waveform is a lot of sine waves.

I only studied for the code and Tech. They made me take every test while I was there. Doing that, I passed the General. Failed the extra, though. Not bad considering I never expected to walk out with more than a Tech plus.

Vinnie;

The answer is "it depends".

If the alignment procedure requires you to measure voltages and adjust for specific values then the scope and the probe must have a bandwidth beyond the max frequency of interest. For example at 27 MHz the scope and probe have to be rated for more than 30 MHz. Most bandwidth specifications are at the "3 db" points meaning the response is down by 50% at the stated bandwidth. Depending on the filter used on the scope input channel the scope response may roll off at 3 db per octave, doubling in frequency, or faster. Of course the response starts to roll of somewhat before that point.

Now if all you're looking for is a relative reading, peak response or modulation checks for example, a lower bandwidth scope and probe could work so long as the response is enough to give a good display on the screen. I would guess a 15MHz bandwidth scope may work OK.

One other thing to watch out for is circuit loading due to the scope probe resistance AND capacitance. The probe capacitance can be in the order of some 10's of picofards. This can cause serious circuit detuning if you use a probe in a circuit where the tuning capacitance is in the same range as the probe to as much as 10 to 20 times that value.

I've seen a lot of very nice 30 to 100 MHz scopes for sale at various hamfests for very reasonable prices. If you don't have one and you plan on doing more electronics work investing in a good scope is a good investment.

Absolutely, filter and ignore.

I filter out known troll subjects and names, but this group has always been targeted more than any other group I use. This group has such a high ratio of shite that I have set my reader to download headers only.
I then mark the few (very few) threads that look worth reading, so they will be downloaded.
Known trolls who post within those threads get knocked out by the filter, as do all replies to their posts.

Life is too short to waste it on newsgroup trolls.

Regards,
Peter.

The upgrade is called the Imax 2000. Why waste money on a 1/2 wave dipole?

But if you insist, have you tried Firestik or Copper?

Just where do these jokers come form. At least all the idiots migrate to the rpm with their dumbass questions. Best to keep all dumbasses in a central location......

So whats to freaking terrific about a measly old 1200 gph pump,,. its small by most standards....and it sucks about like rpm and the mods and members do.....Duh, I would use 1/2" ......duh duh duh.....you really do belong in rpm asking such a dumbassed question ....did the outlet and inlet size ever give you a freaking clue dude.if not it should..DUH DUH DUH!

Its probably too much of a smple task for simpltons like your cohabitating with in rpm. Before its over those fuckoffs wil have yu building a skippy filter and adding 100 feet of clear tube and wrappng your mommas pantyhose around the pump and it still won;t work!

Hello All:

Here I am ready to put up a new antenna that will set the hole world on its side, with Tecknology, inspiration, and advanced state of the art.

Ooops but I need a stinking 3/8 inch bolt with a few washers and nuts. Yeah and a few other Bitchen Guy Antenna pieces of hardware to get this new marvel of a antenna up in the air. I look around the yard and advanced antenna manufacturing facility (the Garage), I even pop the hood on the big Ford F250 4X4 Truck for a bolt to save a trip into town, and save some time. Welp no dice!

Ok hop in Putt & Park smaller truck, gets 27 miles per gallon, and doesn't have as many bullet holes as the big truck tho. I notice it needs gas, oh wonderful! So I peel out going down the dirt road going side ways, listening to Led Zeppelin, ZZ Top, and few others. Good thing I haven't started drinking yet!

So get gas, and quick sanwidtch, but theres some nut ball there in front of me buying candy bars, and hair restore location, and some other communist shit!, so I have to wait for this goof, trying to pay for his crapp with a travelers check. Then I am haulin the mail again. Theres a parking spot right up front for us Bitchen Antenna Type of Guys, at the hardware store. I am sure this is a FCC rule.

I go in and pick up the hardware from the nuts and bolts hardware section, knowing it like the back of my hand. But at the pay counter theres a semi nice old lady buying potted plants, Plastic Napkin Holders, and some communist gardening crapp. Oh and she is paying for it with a credit card. I hold my " whats wrong with you people" comment. Knowing she can't take all day there, and I am supposed to be adult. Or something like "Wow this is a Dime holding up a Dollar"

I cringe, when she asks for the location of more unnecessary shit, and the sales person has all ready filled out her recite.

I look around for more sale counter people, and there is no one else there, darn! I can't believe these hardware store have lost all grip on realaity, ME having to wait in front of normal people?!?!??!

Finially I pay the guy a waping two dollars and 5 cents, in CASH. And I am haulin the mail back home at mach 2. Up goes the antenna and it is kicking major ass, BITCHEN!

Does this evey happen to you?

A scope probe with 50 MHz bandwidth will be suficient. The bandwidth of the probe is stated so that you will avoid attenuation issues at high frequencies. Measurements above the rated bandwidth of the scope probe will yield inaccurate measurement levels. If you are just looking for the presence of a signal and the absolute level is not needed then don't worry to much about the bandwidth of the scope probe.

Derek Broughton and Galen is a master at that process. Had a super teacher Ron the hipocrite preacher man......Of course Jan J and Gill and Kathy Thirty Acres (she thinks she is a native american indian girl ..duh!) actually created that process after their monkeys got too nasty, and they had to transport koi, goldfish and frogs from pond to pond. Now you know why a pussy smells like a dead fish huh! Its these women that got that crap started and it just migrated to the ass......I hear Jan and Kathy give lessons every Saturday.....

Better watch out though as this crap turns on their other buddy Tynk and she can really do a bristlenose catfish some good when she sexually abuses it.

maybe marqueer and DOUgay can get a bunch of the pond dudes together for a gay sex orgy.
the first radio club based on ponds AND dick sucking!

then they can travel the world sucking off each other in all sorts of scummy ponds and showing the images on ATV.

I just wanted to measure modulation on a TRC-455 that I am restoring. I have a 10x probe with the bandwidth being 60Mhz in the 10x position.

But I have bad news. I apparently need and RF generator for alignment of the receiver. I do not own one. I have everything else. So off to ebay I go. Any recommendations?

Perhaps, but those queens and hussys in rec.ponds.moderated love it any way they can get it......
I have to think that some of those so called split tails just have to have a sausage in those panties and the hard tails of rpm have snappers......but we do know one thing in common with them all and that is none f them have a back bone of any kind.

This post and most of the crossposts are the droppings of one Roger Wiseman of 610 Glen Haven Avenue in Glendale, West Virginia. He is also an Amatuer Radio operator with the callsign AB8MQ.

A Google search of his name or his callsign will turn up reams of information about this 50 year old divorced troll and Internet stalker, most of it bad.

Vinnie;

Why don't you just try using another radio as the signal source? Run it in to a dummy load. A loop or two around the dummy load may pick up enough signal leakage that you can feed it in to the rig you're setting up.

Marqueer the uneducated admits he perverts ("preverts"[sic]) typos as well as the lilttle boys he lures into his ham shack too.

Morkie admits his wife is a he in

"dave car" "yelow"?

Poor Marqueer, he doesn't even have a G.E.D., much less 3 college degrees.

What's "lenth"? Is that how Gavi measures your manhood? It must be in the millimeter range, since your first wife preferred to sleep with blacks instead of you.

I have several pond books and can say I learned MORE online than from the books. Our first pond was put in according to a Tetra Pond Book (a year before we got online) and the information was awful. We have to redo
the
berm on this first pond as we did the larger one this past summer.
There was little mention of soil types and how to stabilize the berm - and almost nothing about predators.

The pond

> 'world' doesn't need another poorly designed, poorly constructed pond.

Which you can make quite easily following the advice in some of the books out there. The pond world doesn't need any artificial ponds at all for that matter! LOL!!! :-) Ponds are fun, a hobby and certainly not necessary for the world to go on.

Some people are on tight budgets and that should be considered - not everyone has a 6 figure income.

Oh have I got the answer for you..... from an earlier post

"Here I sit in a tent next to a lake with my hands shaking and the coffee helping my nerves. What has this got to do with building a water garden you ask? Well, sit back and let me share the story of my "little water garden" that started a few months back.
Boy, these ponds sure look like a lot of fun to build and our neighbor fred up the street said it was easy to install yourself.
So I started to dig a hole and everything was going great until I hit "the Rock", which would later prove to be my demise. I thought I could dig around this rock by hand so I dug and dug and well you get the picture. I went through two wooden handled shovels trying to leverage the rock out so I ordered a steel shaft shovel from biggertools.com on the internet. Of course I paid the extra for the overnight delivery(I didn't want to slow my progress). It was delivered the next day by 8:30 AM.
By 9:30 AM I was rushed to the doctor's office by ambulance.....why you ask? Well the steel shafted shovel weighed in at 90 lbs. After digging for about an hour I felt a snap in my back which caused me in turn to drop the shovel on my big toe which would have been fine had I been wearing boots...unfortunately I was wearing sandals which do not have steel reinforced straps!!!
After a few stitches to my toe, corrective shoes and 2 weeks of therapy for my back and I was as good as well, well a forty year old.
Back to the rock....Well, I called explosives-r-us and they assured me they could handle this rock. Everything was going well until they pushed the button. The good news is my pond is going to be much bigger than originally thought. The bad news is it blew out all of my neighbors windows. I told him, look you will get much better ventilation this summer that way. He found no humor in the moment.....my insurance company assured me I was covered under the "idiot clause" in my insurance, of course less my deductible.

I hopped into my escort and sped off to the local pond store to get my 30 'x40' liner. With the help of the employees we dropped the liner into the trunk off by sliding it off of the forklift.
I didn't think the noise from my bumper dragging was all that bad..I just turned the 8 track up louder and I didn't notice the sparks from the bumper starting the prairie fire in the lot next to my house.
I pulled into the drive and my wife and I pulled the liner out after using several successful words I learned from my dad as a kid that always helped in situations like this. It was after I got the liner out that I noticed the smoke coming from the back yard....remember the sparks
from my bumper?
With a little help from the local volunteer fire dept. we had the fire out in a couple of hours. Man that smoke really does burn your eyes and the looks from my wife were pretty painful also.
The good news is the fire killed all the grass around my pond and now landscaping will be much easier I pointed out to my wife.
The rest of the pond construction was pretty uneventful except for
the new electrical panel we had to install to handle the 25,000 gph pump I had to have and the fact that the city tracked the lowering of the local reservoir by two feet to me filling up our new pond.
I was able to stock my water garden with some great Koi...the bad news is my mother-in-law found out I had hocked some of her jewelry to fund this purchase. She has decided not to press charges now and the police said
the ink will wear off of my fingertips in a few weeks.
Which brings me back to the tent and the coffee. My wife said I can move back in as soon as I pay her mother back for the fish and I can find someone to get this Koi tattoo(don't ask) off of my body.
I have had to take two other jobs to pay off the pond related expenses
as follows
2 wooden shovels @ $20.00 ea. $40.00
1 Steel shafted shovel @ $40.00 $40.00
1 Overnight delivery $60.00
Doctor's Office Visit $100.00

Donation to volunteer fire dept.
$500.00
New Electrical panel $700.00

$275.00

"I got a copy of the Daphnian (the bulletin of the Boston Aquarium Society) in the mail a couple weeks back, and have been forgetting almost daily to post my thanks here to whoever reprinted my silly little article there. (I carefully kept the name of my beneficiary on file,
but
a hard-drive crash scrambled it for me.)
I also want to thank the list as a whole- if it had not been for the friendly atmosphere here I never would have posted something so frivolous. And yet it resulted in something very important to me- the first time I have ever seen real print. And in the prime inside-cover spot, too...
I bought everyone at work a soda the day that publication arrived. I can't do that for everyone here, but I would if I could.
And my fish are fine. The house, car, and retaining wall, well, work progresses.... Phil"

You said the magic or dreaded word "Koi". Research Koi ponds as they are typically deeper, include bottom drains, settling chambers, Skimmer, UV and filters that may include anything from vortex systems, bead filters, trickle towers, or combos of these items. I built my 16x14x4 with BD, setting pond, bead filter, Skimmer with UV and 45 EPDM liner for $4000. This includes $1000 for coping rocks, plus landscaping, also the cost of concrete block, cement, rebar, plumbing, plants, pump, ect.

In 6 years my Koi have grown to be between 6-8 lbs. They are huge poop makers, so plan accordingly to save headaches down the road.

Happy ponding.

.... nope, dont have to

http://weloveteaching.com/mypond/mypond.htm
.... my pond is made of 2x4 greenwood sides with greenwood plywood, carpet padding, permalon liner, the filter is 2x8 pine with 2x5 cedar front on the filter and around the front. I DO have a big ass air blower @ $400 but it isnt totally necessary. I have a pump for the water fall. Once a year I pull out the plants (to take em inside for winter) and suction out the crud in the filter with a wet vac. I do use a UV light but the filter really sucks the rest out. The pond has been up since 2000 and I can still see the stones knocked out of my lily pot and a couple wrinkles in the liner on the bottom and have never cleaned the bottom at all.
All summer I walk out, sit down, feed the fish. once a week or when I remember I squish the snails attached to the little wimp pump that feeds the UV. A couple times in the summer if I think the water is slowing I pull up the pump to clean off the grate that keeps junk outta the pump. A couple times a year I run 500 gallons or so out and replace. Other than that ..... I just enjoy it immensely. absolutely cheap and simplicity itself to take care of. Ingrid

I couldn't believe we had snow in town here in southern oregon (usa) (not at my house lower down though) just a few days ago. Man - we might have a real winter this year at last, you go ozone! With all of the garbage that was/is going on here in this newsgroup I had actually thought you were one bad dude roy! It's cool now that I see who the real perpetrator is you're all right
in my book roy, later! P.s. - my digital signature is above.

~ jan Jan this brings back a memory for me. One year winter came early and DH did not put the winter fertilizer down in the fall. So it sat in the shed. Then in like late February he put it out- on top of the snow. Yes- on top of the snow! So the snow melted- like 7 inches of it- and some of it ran in to my pond, and in March the water was so pea green thick you could cut it with a knife. The fish were gasping- we set the pumps out early and unbelievably they survived.
I don't think he will do that again. lol -- Koitoy

Yikes! How did he manage to spread it?

I got it put down Friday, course the drop spreader (a cheap plastic one that I brought 10 years ago) broke after just a few rows. The level that opens and closes the hopper broke clean off, so DS put a clamp on it and I just did the best I could with an open-continuously hopper. I put very little close to the ponds, and we got a little rain to wet it but not run-off, so I think I'm safe. :) ~ jan

Today begins a new series of jokes about moparhoLICK. Enjoy, courtesy of your buddies at the AKC!

JOKE NUMBER 1:

Q.How do you drive moparhoLICK crazy?

A.Put him in a round room and tell him there is a horny trucker in the corner.

Hello All:

Yeah I am glad you guys found some humor in this. But it really strains me to have to wait in any line with normal people, paying with Travelers Checks from Afghanistan, and buying stuff in front of pay and go customers.

Was down in Beautiful Down Town Burbank, at the HRO (Ham Radio Outlet) Store. The local know it all goof ball was there elebowing me out of the way to the cashier. I let him go, but the store guy said he would take me first since I spent 10 times more then this goof, and I was there first. I felt really good about that.

Its fucking purple, and always runs its croaker telling other frogs how great it is. It has the brains of Derek Broughtn, and the skanky ass of KAthy thirty acres, and the dumbness of Galen.....Jan is a bit put off by it since it does nt have a vagina, only a big dick, in place of its head, hence its name the dick head rpm frog.....They acconplisehd this by swapping spit and frog spawn foam in their weekly / daily orgies with various natural fauna, which by the eway they have driven off and now wonder why.

I have an HP 8656 generator. A bit pricy even still today. I got mine at a fantastic price 8 yrs ago. Bought it when the factory was closing down and moving as excess equiptment for around $400. They are still commanding around $700 to $1000.

Really for CB work if you can find any of the older B&K CB test equiptment in decent shape I would suggest those. Equiptment like HP, Wavetek, and others are very pricy for home test equiptment.

Why do you let someone push you around like that? If it ever happens again you grab him by the scruff of the neck, escort him out the door, and teach him a few things about interference.

Hello All:
Here I am ready to put up a new antenna that will set the hole world on its side, with Tecknology, inspiration, and advanced state of the art.
Ooops but I need a stinking 3/8 inch bolt with a few washers and nuts.
Yeah and a few other Bitchen Guy Antenna pieces of hardware to get this new marvel of a antenna up in the air. I look around the yard and advanced antenna manufacturing facility (the Garage), I even pop the hood on the big Ford F250 4X4 Truck for a bolt to save a trip into town, and save some time. Welp no dice!
Ok hop in Putt & Park smaller truck, gets 27 miles per gallon, and doesn't have as many bullet holes as the big truck tho. I notice it needs gas, oh wonderful! So I peel out going down the dirt road going side ways, listening to Led Zeppelin, ZZ Top, and few others. Good thing
I haven't started drinking yet!
So get gas, and quick sanwidtch, but theres some nut ball there in front of me buying candy bars, and hair restore location, and some other communist shit!, so I have to wait for this goof, trying to pay for his crapp with a travelers check. Then I am haulin the mail again. Theres a parking spot right up front for us Bitchen Antenna Type of Guys, at the hardware store. I am sure this is a FCC rule.
I go in and pick up the hardware from the nuts and bolts hardware section, knowing it like the back of my hand. But at the pay counter theres a semi nice old lady buying potted plants, Plastic Napkin Holders, and some communist gardening crapp. Oh and she is paying for it with a credit card. I hold my " whats wrong with you people" comment.
Knowing she can't take all day there, and I am supposed to be adult. Or something like "Wow this is a Dime holding up a Dollar"
I cringe, when she asks for the location of more unnecessary shit, and the sales person has all ready filled out her recite.
I look around for more sale counter people, and there is no one else there, darn! I can't believe these hardware store have lost all grip on realaity, ME having to wait in front of normal people?!?!??!
Finially I pay the guy a waping two dollars and 5 cents, in CASH. And I am haulin the mail back home at mach 2. Up goes the antenna and it is kicking major ass, BITCHEN!
Does this evey happen to you?
Jay in the Mojave

Home Depot is like that. Lowes is no better. I'd much rather put up with a long wait at a smaller, locally-owned store as opposed to the giant retailer thieves that carry inferior products. Use that Armstrong method and point that bitchen' antenna due east. And a tad to the south.

Californication communications are all the rage these past coupla days from the waterfall state.

Hello All:
Yeah I am glad you guys found some humor in this. But it really strains me to have to wait in any line with normal people, paying with Travelers Checks from Afghanistan, and buying stuff in front of pay and go customers.
Was down in Beautiful Down Town Burbank, at the HRO (Ham Radio Outlet) Store. The local know it all goof ball was there elebowing me out of the way to the cashier. I let him go, but the store guy said he would take me first since I spent 10 times more then this goof, and I was there first. I felt really good about that.

When, where and by whom ? Let's have some details that can be checked.

I'm not going to repeat them. They're hurtful to me because they contained abuse that was directed against me by someone else at the time and which got picked up and thrown again in the trial. It is a matter of record but I won't repeat it here.

>>> PM: >Who's character is being assassinated? It isn't clear from the post.

Why would "they" wish to assassinate your character?

Well, let's put it this way - just because this is the first time it's happened in this way, from these people, on this scale, doesn't mean that it hasn't happened before, on a lesser scale. At university there were people who quite overtly hated me and would have wished something nasty to happen to me. Because of where I went making the wrong sort of enemies is pretty deadly.

"They" would wish to assassinate my character because it had all been done before, and because they knew I would not be able to react in any other way than I'd reacted previously.

>>> ##: They invaded my home with their bugs, they repeated what I

>>> ##: our friends in ITN, last but not least our friends in Capital
>>> ##: Radio in London and on Radio 1.

Please give details of when, where and by whom these comments were made, so that they can be checked.

This was four, five years ago... sorry, I don't remember. I can remember individual incidents, words which were repeated by different people at different times in different locations.

Around the end of 1992 Private Eye rtan a front-cover with John and Norma Major, with the title "Major's support lowest ever" and John saying to Norma "Come back norma" on the front cover. What can you read in to that? Not a lot, seems like standard fare for PE. The first time I saw it I was in the pub with some people from work. One was expressing doubts to the other (let's call the first one Simon, shall we? and the second one Phil?) about whether what was going on was right. Phil's answer was that if Private Eye was doing it then it must be ok, "they're usually right".

A few days later, again near work, there were some students laughing in the street, "Were you COMING BACK later? But I thought you said you were COMING BACK ha ha ha?" Play on words, you see. Not very nice, either. I had start medication soon afterwards. Clever people, these chaps who think up PE titles. Just slightly lacking in any sense of morality.

>>> ##: How did they do this? I'll give you an example. About a year ago,
>>> ##: I was listening to Chris Tarrant (Capital Radio DJ among other

>>> ##: which mirrored something I had said a day or two before.
>>> ##: Now that got broadcast to the whole of London - if any recordings
>>> ##: are kept of the shows then it'll be there.

What was the date of the broadcast ?
Out of 2 million plus listeners, why should you be the only one that Tarrant was allegedly referring to ?

Sometyime in spring 1994. I can't remember the date, I heard the broadcast in the car - I was going into the office from London that day and just happened to snap on the radio, and hey presto! Mr Tarrant gives us the benefit of his excellent understanding.

>>> ##: That's exactly what we did. We went to a competent, professional
>>> ##: detective agency in London, paid them over 400 quid to debug our house.
>>> ##: They found nothing.

What was the name of the detective agency and their address ?

I don't see why I should tell you that, but they're in Yellow Pages; they're a well-established outfit.

>>> PM: >What? Spend a quarter mil. a year to amuse themselves? And why not

>>> PM: >doing something, and I don't think you are, though you may have some

>>> ##: See the above.

Is there a deep dark secret in your past ?

Apart from "it's all happened before in a different way", no.

Is your name truly Mike Corley, or are you using it as an alias ?

It's an alias. I'm not English by ethnic origin. If someone manages to pronounce my name as well as that guy did then they must have been really trying.

>>> ##: There's a little story behind this. First of all, in 1992 I worked >>> ##: for a company where the people made clear they knew what was going on,
>>> ##: first of all directly (the very first evening I was there I went out to
>>> ##: the pub with them and the Technical Director said to another guy,
>>> ##: "is this the bloke who's been on TV?" "yeah, I think so")

Have you appeared, or been reported by name on TV ?
When, where and by whom ?

No. Never. Not directly.

>>> ##: Also, in summer 1992 I went on a trip abroad to Europe by coach,

What was the name of the coach company and your date of departure ?

It was a national express coach. At dover we boarded a ferry for Holland somewhere.
The company that organized the trip went out of business some time ago, so they won't have records of passengers - so we can't get any corroboration from anyone else that way. We tried all that last summer, ran into a brick wall.

The other thing is in summer 1992 I was visibly ill, so other people in the party might remember that more than anyone getting at me on the coach trip.

>>> ##: >>Yes, this gets me. I think the answer is that I was set up by >>> ##: >>someone. I was very aware when this started back in 1990 that I >>> ##: >>was being painted as a "threat" to which people had to "react"

Why were you being painted as a "threat"; is this related to a "deep,dark, secret" ?

Aaaarrrrgh. I think I should make clear that that's their created justification rather than the real reason. They started harassing first and then came up with the reasons for it.

>>>
>>> ##: I think I know who set me up.

Who ?

Someone who knew me some time ago. Someone who would have been able to talk this little campaign into existence.

>>> ##: The bloke can't even control his own mind without medicine.

Is this true ? What is the medication and dosage ?

Yes, I'm afraid so. Sulpiride, 200mg a day. It's designed to stop people coming up with the sort of ideas you've heard here for the last few weeks. Give him a higher dose!!

In the long term it causes tardive dyskinesia, tardive dementia and general nasty stuff to your brain. So it's three years of sulpiride talking to you here.

Dam from what I hear TYNK, you give a pretty good blow job, and have been known to suck the chrome off a trailer ball.....These folks are just looking for someone to have some entertainment with and they find you quite interesting and entertaiing besides indulgeing......its that super fat ass of yours that really turns em on.....just itching to get packed! Why not call your lesbian carpet muncher buddies Gill and Jan and KAthy30a to help out. I bet your other buddies Derek and Jim and Galen would love ago at it as wel.....

Evidently your better at getting your fudge packed and giving blow jobs than you have been at removing cross posts TYNK! Your actually quite better at it than the one you used to accuse f being one ever was.....so I sure do not know why you used to bitch about Carol all the time. You certainly had no competition.....yu are quite the Top Dog in blow jobs, cross posts and fudge packing and feeding trolls.

I find it funny that people who sit and talk up a shit storm on the interent would naiver have the balls to say anything like that to anyone in a real life setting. Cowardly. I try to be cool with pretty much everyone, whether on the internet or not, and I think the keyboard warriors are really lame and squat to piss pussies.. isn't a good enough word.

At least a pussy has a good use. Well, at least to most CBer's.

James;

One of the problems buying used test equipment is the manufacture finds there is some weakness in the design resulting in frequent failures, one reason why they may quit manufacturing it.

I don't know if the HP signal generator you mentioned is one such item. I remember in some back issues of QEX somebody came up with a modification to replace a section in the output of a HP signal generator that was known to be particularly failure prone, the original part used isn't available anymore if I remember right.

Others have picked up old Tech scopes real cheap that had problems, hoping to fix them, and finding out that the blown parts, like Tunnel Diodes, are now almost imposable to find since almost nobody makes them anymore. And the ones that do, if you can find the exact one you need, want such a high price for them it isn't worth it.

The HP generator I have is a standard that HP sold for commercial and industrial use throughout much of the 1990's but now is discontinued.
The one I have is a HP8656A with the attenuator replaced with the same one that was used in the HP8656B. One of the HP8656A's main weakness was that of the attentuator at the output. The genreator has an input for connection to a high stability time base which improves the performance especially when using it at frequencies around 800 MHz. I also have a 10MHz. high stability TXCO that keeps the accuracy of the generator frequency set to less than +/- 1 Hz.

Obsolescence is not necessarily due to problem plagued unit though that can be a cause. WIth HP8656/57 series that may not have been the problem. Lower demand and cost of manufacturing can also lead to obsolescence. Lack of demand can be due to not having features and options that the end user demands. Often a new model is introduced with more bells and whistles as well as defect fixes that will all but obsolete the previous model.

I have been very happy with the unit I have. The front keypad is still in very excellent shape as the unit I have was on the factory floor and control of it was via the GPIB connection from an HP workstation.

Well that's good. I'm a bit leery of spending big bucks on used test gear since you don't know what the last guy did to it abuse wise, something stupid like keying up the xmit with the signal generator still attached. I found that if the equipment looks good cosmetically there is a good chance the guy selling it didn't abuse the equipment, much.

I would like to get a nice spectrum analyzer but anything worth having is in the $2K range, a bit too much to take a chance on it from a total stranger.
I could spent $6K on a nice new portable LCD one. 8-))

For the same reason the moderators on rec.ponds are afraid to be called on their actins on not following the charters as agreed on.
Typical though from what I hear for l cocksucker types anyhow.

Guess the moderators n rpm all have that don;t give a shit cocksucker

Have you ever heard of the zero point field? It can be used to heal or to kill. There's an organization just forming that has begun sending negative energy to you phallocephalic crossposting fecocerebrals, so your cells will begin to die off. We pick five subjects a month to kill in this completely legal manner. Watch your numbers begin to atrophy.

If you think this is a joke or bullshit, I suggest you note the uncanny sick feeling that is just now beginning to come over you.

I'm about to get on the road (long-haul) as a new trucker and I'm trying to get a handle on what would be a good CB for the truck I hope to get assigned (a Pete 387).

A trucker friend said that he thought Galaxy is a good brand to go with. So, I'm thinking of going with one of their models, but don't know which one to pick. I gather the DX-959 has been a popular model. OTOH, the new 979 looks like it has a smaller form factor that might fit in the dash.

Any and all advice is welcome. Thanks ahead of time.

Galaxy sucks. Loud radios, but drift terribly. I had one. Get a Uniden PC68XL or Uniden PC78 XL, would be plenty and cheaper, and better.

So, this brings me to my question about 10 Meter radios. Are these like CB radios on steroids?

I see the disclaimer that operating these radios is unlawful without an amateur radio operator's license. Does this law ever get enforced?

In terms of practical usage, are 10 meters preferable to CBs? What I mean is, does the extra power really matter in the day-to-day real world life of your typical trucker?

Thanks.

If you want a Spectrum Analyzer just to monitor your transmitter signals and not do design work with there are a couple of nice circuits on teh net that can be put together for under $200. Maybe under $100.

The one by the Green Bay Professional Packet Radio group is a nice one for signal monitoring. It is based on the W7ZOI and K7TAU circuits and is a better one as it will work up to 1Gig. Granted these are not as good as commercial built test equiptment but for monitoring emmisions compliance it is better than nothing. I think the circuit would be neat to interface it to a quarter VGA color LCD panel.

Yes it does

and BTW the license is NOW very easy to get a single exam 35 q's and 75 perecent score required get a fair section of 10 a second exam the same size gives the rest of 10 and most of Ham HF

check arrl.org for details

well,
a single firestick (KW-4 model) would suffice or you can go with the "co-phased" antenna kits available. it would be a good idea to have a progessional installer look at it and give you an estimate. the antenna (or kit) starts at around $29.00 and goes up from there. typical installation can range from $50.00 to $150 depending on what needs to be done.

still a properly setup system (good radio, good antenna system) more than outweighs the cost of initial installation.

Does anyone have any recommendations in terms of Uniden vs. Cobra?

Right now I'm comparing:
http://www.uniden.com/products/productdetail.cfm?product=PC78ELITE with:

http://www.cobra.com/index.php?page=shop/flypage&product_id=6&id=1

I supposed the Uniden would be fine. The only thing (and this may seem silly) is that I'm not fond of amber backlights; the Cobra has green.

Thanks.

Stay away from Cobra. Cheap labor, cheap quality, cheap performance. Uniden used to make the CB for Cobra, thru the 1980's, and then Cobra decided to improve profit margins and go with cheaper vendors. I have not hear anything good from non-Uniden made Cobras.

The most propulat I see are the Wilson mirror mounts and the Firestiks. I also see those coily styles quite often, but I don't don't the advantage of those, and most are so big that they require mounting on an angle to get under toll booths, etc.

Trust me. I had the 949. Go with Uniden. I had to re-align the Galaxy every 2 weeks, especially in winter. Luckily, they emailed me a quickie alignment procedure. But that bordered on the ridiculous. I stuck a freq counter on my Uniden, and the thing is rock steady. And that was the same freq counter I had on the Galaxy.

Please forgive my ignorance but I'm not sure how to interpret
"firestick." Is this a type of antenna? ...or a brand/make? And what about "KW-40" ... a model, I take it? I will try searching for "firestick kw-40" and see what I come up with.

Thanks.

Rarely. Mostly at the vendor's side, not the buyer's side.

If you are going to talk on channel 19 only, the Uniden is fine. If you want to take on any 40, the Uniden is fine. If you want more power and the ability to talk off of the CB frequencies, then get a 10 meter.

But again, most 10 meter radios are the Galaxy, Ranger, Connex, etc, type. Most are made by the Ranger company, and they drift terribly. Cobra came out with the new 10 meter, but they make them in China, and I heard they perform like they are made in China.

It looks increasingly like Uniden would be the way to go. And I can live with the amber backlight!

Question: what does a frequency counter do? What does it do for the CB radio user? And related to this, what would be a good make/model to use with the Uniden PC78ELITE?

Sorry to couple so much ignorance with so many questions. But I sure do appreciate the help.

I use it for Sideband, to lock in off-frequency stations. You don't need it for AM. I had it on my Galaxy 949, and that is how I noticed the drift. It's also useful if you have extra channels added to the Uniden, otherwise, you don't need it. The radio I replaced the Galaxy with is, the Uniden Grant LT. They stopped making it, and it's the Sideband version of the radios you are looking at. My backlight is light green.

No big deal. Galaxies are immensly popular, more so than Uniden. They are loud on AM. But I had both, and the Uniden is superior. The Galaxy drift problems are also no secret. Get a nice noise canceling mic like the Turner or Astatic. Also, there is a noise cancelling power mic which is called the Road Devil. Stay away from roger beeps and echoes. Half the trucker I here with echo, I cannot understand. They sound like complete shit.

Here is firestik. Most of these are at truck stops.

http://www.firestik.com/

Here are Wilson:

I heard of K-40, but not KW-40. I think the Wilson is more popular. I see more of them on Trucks than K-40.

Vinnie, thanks a lot for all the input. I'll probably leave the 10-bands to some future (if ever) point in time -- perhaps, if and when I develop more of an interest in ham radio, etc. So, I'll go with the PC78ELITE. BTW, I find it interesting that Uniden doesn't appear to market any 10-bands

Someone else posted a link to a Magnum radio being sold at copper.com and they seem to have a really good price on the Uniden:
http://www.copper.com/cart/product_info.php?products_id=617

Copper Electronics looks like an established and (I hope) reputable seller. So, I'll probably order from them and try to get my antenna from them as well.

Thanks again for all the help.

Carefull with Copper. I have heard horror stories about their return policy.
Once they sell it to you, they won't take it back. Even if you have to pay $10 or so, get it from a place that will accept returns.

Here is Amazon for $20 more than Copper, but they have free shipping:

http://www.amazon.com/Uniden-PC78-Elite-40-Channel-Ergonomic/dp/B0001YFW1C

I have had great satisfaction with Amazon. They have a great return policy.

No problem. I heard that Road Devil mic is pretty good for truckers in a high noise environment:

Yeah... typo on my end. Should have said, "K40." There's one advertized here:
http://www.copper.com/cart/product_info.php?products_id=419

The ad claims that the National Institute of Standards and Technology found this to be superior (at least my some criteria) to the Wilson 2000.

Also, there now appears to be a Wilson 5000:
http://www.wilsonantenna.com/t5000.htm

I guess I'll probably end up going with one of these two... or a Firestik.

You can get the Road Devil cheaper on ebay:

http://tinyurl.com/2a2dmy

Also, I think the radio you have has weather. If you don't need it, don't get it. I think the all the Elite have weather and backlight. If you get the PC78XL or 68XL, they are essential the same without the weather and backlight.

I had both. They were the same with stock power. Get the Wislon or Firestiks if you plan on adding an amplifier later. The K40 cannot handle power.

The 5000 is a car antenna, not a truck. Also, the 1000 and the 5000 are the same, accept the 5000 can handle 5000 watts. That is Wilson way stealing money from you. I think you have to stick to the 2000 or firestik.

Whoah! Thanks for the warning on Copper. The last thing I need right now is a return hassle, as I'm trying to get myself equipped to hit the road so I can... hit the road! I'll probably avoid them per your advice, thought their prices tempt me to at least research their stated return policy.

I'm all for getting one of the mics you recommend, but this brings a question: it seems that the PC78ELITE comes with a mic. Should I just assume that the include mic will just not be up-to-snuff?

Thanks again.

While ever mindful that I don't know shampoo from shinola, their ad sure makes it look like it's intended for trucks, and indeed, its model name

10 meter radios are not CB and require an Amateur (Ham) Radio operator's license issued by the FCC to transmit on the 10 meter ham band. You have to take a test to get a ham license. For you to use a radio on the 10 meter band without a license is illegal and the FCC is monitoring 10 meters for such activity.

I'm about to get on the road (long-haul) as a new trucker and I'm trying to get a handle on what would be a good CB for the truck I hope to get assigned (a Pete 387).
A trucker friend said that he thought Galaxy is a good brand to go with. So, I'm thinking of going with one of their models, but don't know which one to pick. I gather the DX-959 has been a popular model. OTOH, the new 979 looks like it has a smaller form factor that might fit in the dash.
Any and all advice is welcome. Thanks ahead of time.

Galaxy is a good choice, especially for your use. Great audio and pretty maintenance-free.
Keep the sunny side up and watch out for all the 4-wheelers.....you know how the majority of them drive on the interstates.....clueless and as if it's their first time.

Check out the Wilson trucker antenna. Wilson makes a good antenna. Of course if all you're concerned with is talking in front and behind you with other truckers you might want to look at cophased antennas (two antennas, one on each side of the truck) but the spacing between them needs to be ample.

CB by law is 4 watts out. Many export radios can easily double that.
Doubling one's power at low watts can make a huge difference on 11 meter.

If you are going to talk on channel 19 only, the Uniden is fine. If you want to take on any 40, the Uniden is fine. If you want more power and the ability to talk off of the CB frequencies, then get a 10 meter.
But again, most 10 meter radios are the Galaxy, Ranger, Connex, etc, type. Most are made by the Ranger company, and they drift terribly.
Cobra came out with the new 10 meter, but they make them in China, and I heard they perform like they are made in China.

Carefull with Copper. I have heard horror stories about their return policy. Once they sell it to you, they won't take it back.

I've heard stories about them for years, and since I have been on this group, that is all I have substantiated about Copper....nothing but stories. Concerning the return policy, this is quite popular actually.
Many major stores do not accept returns and refer to the manufacturer, just like the water heater I recently installed. Giant sticker says "do not return to place of purchase, instead call...."
For what it's worth, the Copper-bashing began in the late nineties with a few "techs" who were being way underbid by Copper's pricing.

I've purchased from Copper a total of three times, no problem. I purchased from D & R in Ontario, had a problem, full return, clusterfuck to receive a credit. I purchased from CB Candy, had a problem, they corrected it, but it took way too much time. Sold a unit for Brian (via a referral) and the dude got his order fast but moved away before I could get a definitive opinion about the linear. If I have a poor experience with a business, it's given a chance to correct it. If it doesn't happen, I'll never do business with it again.

I guess you're right. But...

I was on the road last winter (with a trainer) and he kept the CB on a lot. And I have to admit that sometimes I got pretty tired of listening to what seemed like a lot of BS'n around. But maybe that wasn't channel 19. If it was, then it seems like one might want to hear about the weather from other truckers but might not be able to amidst all the chatterboxes out there. In such a case, it occurs to me, it might be good to have a dedicated weather channel as a fallback.

it is enough to know that SSB is apeice of an AM transmition crudely speaking and to learn that AM is Dsb or Double sideband

You are right about stories. That is all I have heard. Hard to shake a reputation once someone has started a rumor.

They don't make one anymore. But you can get the Grant LT on ebay. It's the same as the Grant XL, but these boneheads pay a premium for the XL, because it has a great rep. I even emailed Uniden and they confirmed it. XL were going for $300 for NIB. LT were about $125 NIB. Same radio. My LT has incredible ears.

To make it simple, it's a method of transmiision that is usually used for long distance talking. Usually reserved for channels 35-40. Truckers don't use it.

I do service work for a medical company, and drive 50,000 per year, in my minivan. I usually get behind a truck going 65-70, and stay about 5-6 lengths behind. They shield me and it's not safe to weave. Most cars are not cut out to handle like BMW or such.

I hate to agree with a RRCB troll, but really, toss that A99 like a spear into the nearest dumpster and get an imax 2000. Be sure to watch for loose splintered fiberglass. I let an A99 go to the dump a few weeks ago. I could have had it for free but it was splintering and I didn't want to deal with it. I took the big busted TV antenna for the aluminum scrap content!

its trademark is a big stick of fiberglass with a spiral of wire wrapped around it.

the KW-4 model is a 4 foot firestick capable of handling more than 400
watts. you can see examples at www.firestik.com.

prices are also pretty cheap. :)

That's a lot of driving! Sounds like you have a good approach. A good trucker will maintain a pretty constant speed, and following one, perhaps with the addition of cruise control, can also maximize your mileage -- at least to the extent possible at that speed.

One thing you will notice around trucks is, either 1 antenna or 2 antennas (1 one each mirror). The 1 antenna will give you approx the same range in a perimeter around the antenna. The 2 antenna setup is called co-phase, and will give you more a directional signal to the front and back of the rig. I am not familiar with co-phasing, and that might be best installed by one of those CB shops. The single antenna is much easier to install.

On rec.ponds MiMi made mention of "An email from Tynk" about what we are doing.
I "replied to author" on Swarvergorilla's post to me about being a baby, etc and wanted to test to see if they were either MiMi, a puppet, or to be trusted.
Obviously, they failed bigtime. It's either MiMi herself, or somebody who knows her private email address and fed her my bullcrap.

The proof is here: ((Read this parti n particular aimed at Carol Gulley, its intentionally meant to screw with yu and create turmoil))

I made up an email, yet made it sound good too. I added all sorts of links to her posts in other screen names, etc.
I said "we're trying a new tactic...making fun of her". Of course this wasn't true as none of us have had a pow wow about doing so. It was a completely made up test email. I was fishing, so to speak.
Well...Swarve who ever they are, failed bigtime. All of a sudden Carol is talking about (made 2 referrences to this email on the pond groups and the aquaria misc group) how she knows the "new plan" and that she got an email from Tynk.
I just wanted to give you folks the behind the scenes look at what she and Swarvegorilla are up to.
So be careful what you say and to whome.
If I go "fishing" again, I'll let you guys in on it first though.

So TYNK and GILL Passman and Jan Jordan admit they intentionally created a stir in the grups just to fuck with Carol Gulley and create a mess to promote a moderated group....

You have to agree, seigel-beagle...I am right. I always am. What you goons know about antennas could be contained in a thimble, my knowledge would have to be contained in a tank truck.

Now there is one thing you know that is the reverse...how to be a hypocritical balless troll and talk junk about others who have the nerve to be identified. You have boxcar loads of that kind of knowledge.

The biggest problem with CO-PHASING of radio antenna's is that the elements have to be at least 1/2 wavelengths apart for maximum effect.
Since a truck can only measure 8 feet of so wide it is impossible to achieve this spacing. A co-phased antenna will give slightly better reception but not true co-phased response.

You can find old VCRs now for under $10 bucks that are loaded with usable parts. Some if you buy brand new would cost three and four times that.

Wrong! There are a number of FCC monitoring station around the country and they do monitor the ham bands. Here are a couple of examples.

On September 12, 2006 and September 13, 2006, an agent of the Commission's Philadelphia Office monitored transmissions on the frequency 439.850 MHz from station KB3GRK and observed the following violation:

Agents in the Commission's Boston Field Office ("Boston Office")
subsequently conducted an investigation, including monitoring and inspecting Baxter's station and, as a result of the investigation, the Boston Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability to Baxter on June
7, 2005, in the amount of twenty-one thousand dollars

Thos are stick mics. They sound rather lame. In a truck, you want a noise canceling mic. That cancels the background noise like the engine revving, but allows your voice to be heard. The Road Devil does both, cancels noise and amplifies your voice.

Seems like it'd be more difficult to monitor, or at least to apprehend a moving trucker. But then again, I'm probably missing something here.

I use an Astatic 636L. Never needs batteries!

While it's not as loud as the stock mike on my radio, folks report it sounds a lot better then the stock mike. Just to qualify my statement, the stock mike in question is a Radio Shack on a TRC-451.

FWIW, I also get good audio reports on 10 meters with my RCI-2950 and a Sadelco ME-3 with the echo turned off. I haven't tried skipping while moving, but if I remember right, that combo would pick up a moth fart back when I used it on 11 meter AM! I always wonder when my battery will die...

There you have it,GAREEE Tabar of North Carolina is a confessed thief. He steals the milk crates which are always marked not for sale.....report to so and so if stolen or found.....And in these times yu wonder why your prices go up. Its fucking crooks like this that Ron Schompert promotes and caters to.....No wonder Ron is a hipocrite., How could he cater to a theif as such.....If GAREEE will steal this crap there is no telling what else he will or has stolen already.....Perhaps a call or email to his local plice department to enlighten them on his illegal behavior is in in order.....Then again all these fucking pond people are theifs as they routinley steal those milk cartons and shipping boxes made from plastic.....wonderful bunch of assholes are they not?

So tell me Gary Tabar Jr., how far do you live from Legion Dr. in Waynesville, NC? I'm going to be in Waynesville come Monday of next week.....Maybe I can drop by anc check out your fucking abortion you call a pond.

Hearing stations from all over the place, but still condations are poor for shotin skip. Stations heard are weak and fad quickly. 11 and 10 meters I am hearing the same locations. No big surprise.

I swing the beam around and have a switched +20dB pre-amp/ straight thru / -20dB attunator mounted near the beam antenna, and still not a lot of help in most cases to get a solid copy. But the best I have heard is stations that do come in and fad out, will return shortly. Rough going indeed!

That is what an unlicensed operator that had been transmitting mobile on the 2 meter ham band in the Dallas area thought until he was pulled over by a deputy and an FCC agent. He thought that as long as he was traveling around on the freeways he couldn't be tracked. Quite a number of truckers operating illegally on the 10 meter band have been caught. There are those on this group that will try to convince you otherwise.

I hear you all hate it when fathers day rolls around there TYNK (Kelly) trying to figure out who yur daddy is must be kind of taxing on the mind.....have you ever figured out whose the daddy of your kiddies? Which really makes me wonder how a chick with a dick can even have kids...never knew conception could occur in the rectum! Evidently it can as your living proof of it!

Don;t sweat iut though, Gill is in the same predicament as yu on fathers day also! She seems to think its Ron the preacher man, but sometimes it makes her think its Galen or Jim.....We know it could not be the faggot Derek though, but Jan is a possibility as Jan is one strange split tail for sure. May have been a guy at one time too.....albeit a hair above a dwarf in stature though but still a hard tail...

Thats Aleutian Islands, my Los Angles City School System eDucation is showing again.

The odd thing is that 10, 11, 20 and 40 meters has the same locations being heard, until the bands change around or drop out.

I put up a common normal guy dipole antenna with a good Balun, LMR400
Coax and got kind of high, man does that work great!

10 meter radios are not CB and require an Amateur (Ham) Radio operator's license issued by the FCC to transmit on the 10 meter ham band. You have to take a test to get a ham license. For you to use a radio on the 10 meter band without a license is illegal and the FCC is monitoring 10 meters for such activity.

Sorry for Roy cross posting his nonsense and taking my replies in ONE place..a place he already destroyed, and cross posting them all over the place.
I have done it with this reply to let the many groups Roy cross posts
to know that I have nothing to do with it.
Occasionally there are times when I have forgotten to remove the many groups off before sending, and for those times I say sorry.
Hopefully you all have him blocked anyway and aren't being bothered by
it. That is until he makes another screen name and the filters have to be fixed yet again.

Ha! I hear ya'! I've been looking at yankee land to buy....somewhere to spend summers of the coming golden years.....come back here for winters. Thing is. I'm looking for acreage with definite mountain terrain, water access (trout stream, lake) and most important of all,,,,,no neighbors. Alabama, SC and Georgia are too flat for what I'm looking for, Tennessee is becoming a haven for disenfranchised Floridians,..that leaves maybe western Virginia or extreme nw NC where it borders TN. 10 meter radios are not CB and require an Amateur (Ham) Radio operator's license
issued by the FCC to transmit on the 10 meter ham band. You have to take a test to get a ham license. For you to use a radio on the 10 meter band without a license is illegal and the FCC is monitoring 10 meters for such activity.

Wrong! There are a number of FCC monitoring station around the country and they do monitor the ham bands. Here are a couple of examples.
On September 12, 2006 and September 13, 2006, an agent of the Commission's Philadelphia Office monitored transmissions on the frequency 439.850 MHz from station KB3GRK and observed the following
violation:
Agents in the Commission's Boston Field Office ("Boston Office")
subsequently conducted an investigation, including monitoring and inspecting Baxter's station and, as a result of the investigation, the Boston Office issued a Notice of Apparent Liability to Baxter on June 7, 2005, in the amount of twenty-one thousand dollars

Oh Shit, here we go again, grab the boots, it's getting deep.. FCC Agents do not ride with deputies of any police entity number one, and number two, they sure as hell do not make traffic stops. An agent stationed at a scale after repeated complaints, maybe, but you're out of your mind with artificial unintelligence. I guess asking for a source

Perhaps, but neither of us has been moronic enough to be forced by the FCC to retest or lose our Ham licenses.

Hi all,

Just thought I'd drop a couple of useful links and say hi.

http://www.dxring.net/11beacon.htm

http://members.tripod.com/~cb_antennas/index.shtml

Glad to see the beacon project outlived many of it's detractors.

Here's wishing a very Happy Father's Day to all whom it applies and may their families enjoy the day as well.

Excuses escuses escuses huh TYNK. Its always you and some others are always allowed to make a screw up without any retribution yet when carol or some of the others did the same they always got accused of trolling and trashing the groups by you and y ur hate group associates....hipocrite TYNK, kind of double standards you live by huh TYNK? You enjoy cross posting to trash and create turmil or else you would not have been in that troll hate group with Gill Passman.......

Translation: Your situation is so sad that even if 20M was wide open during the day, you'd not be able to hear it. It is not unlike hiding in your darkened house all day and telling everybody that the sun is not shining because you can't see it.

No need to, Roger. I'll let the facts speak for themselves. Weasel your way out of this one.

GLENDALE, WV: The FCC sent a Warning Notice November 9, 1999, to General licensee Roger L. Wiseman, KC8JBO, citing evidence that the licensee had been "deliberately and maliciously interfering with the radio operations of other licensed amateurs" on 20 meters. "This interference has occurred at various times in the last several months and includes broadcasting music and other unidentified transmissions," said a letter from FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth. Hollingsworth warned that continued operation of the type described could result in a fine or license revocation proceeding, and he requested that the licensee contact him to discuss the allegations.

GLENDALE, WV [UPDATE]: The FCC had written General licensee Roger L. Wiseman, KC8JBO, on March 29, 2000, advising that it had been made aware of "an ongoing personal dispute" between Wiseman and Advanced licensee Steven A. Tunder, N8WGM, that included allegations of interference or jamming on 20 meters. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth cautioned Tunder and Wiseman to review §97.1 of the Amateur Radio rules and "to make certain that whatever disputes that may exist are not carried over to Amateur Radio frequencies." Hollingsworth invited the two licensees to contact him to discuss the matter. Wiseman alleged in a subsequent communication to the ARRL that Tunder had been harassing him and that he had made the FCC aware of it in the first place. Wiseman indicated that he had been in touch with Hollingsworth to clarify the situation. The FCC had sent Wiseman a Warning Notice last November in response to allegations of deliberate and malicious interference on 20 meters.

GLENDALE, WV: The FCC requested July 11, 2000, that Roger L. Wiseman, KC8JBO, retake the General examination elements under the supervision of an ARRL-VEC volunteer examiner team. Wiseman must appear for retesting by September 11, 2000, or his license will be canceled. Applicants appearing for re-examination are granted an Amateur Radio license consistent with the elements passed. The FCC had written Wiseman on March 29, 2000, advising that it had been made aware of "an ongoing personal dispute" between Wiseman and another licensee that included allegations of interference or jamming on 20 meters. FCC Special Counsel for Amateur Radio Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth invited the two licensees to contact him to discuss the matter. Additionally, the FCC had sent Wiseman a Warning Notice last November in response to allegations of deliberate and malicious interference on 20 meters.

No cigar for you egghead. One of the members of our local ham club was a federal agent and he had FCC agents ride with him many times in tracking down illegal ops and that was the case of this keyclown getting pulled over.

Oh Shit, here we go again, grab the boots, it's getting deep.. FCC Agents do not ride with deputies of any police entity number one, and number two, they sure as hell do not make traffic stops.

Sure, I can believe that...back in the seventies.

An agent stationed at a scale after repeated complaints, maybe, but you're out of your mind with artificial unintelligence. I guess asking

Picked up an old Hygain bilateral linear amplifier recently. It is in pretty good condition considering it's age. The problem is that there is a 25v 100ufd cap that has a broken lead at one end so I am not sure where it broke off from and no tell tale wire nub form any nearby component that I can find. One end is attached to the 12Vdc negative power lug on the inside of the amp. It looks like it may have broken off another ground lug or the positive 12Vdc lug but I am only guessing due to the broken leads' length. I have searchd but cannot find a schematic or online manual so far. Thought someone here might have one and could let me know what the proper connection is. Thanks for any assistance.

The fact is, fatty, it was still ONE warning letter, one advisory letter to Roger AND Steve Tunder, and ONE retest letter.
This has been discussed before, but apparently, you are too obtuse to let it sink into your defective brain cell.
Roger never lost his license nor was it ever suspended. Now, answer why YOU never did pass the General, (or learn cw) even after they lowered the standards, while Roger upgraded to Amateur Extra.

Warning Notice--Amateur Repeater W8RZM

Dear Mr. Lagger:

Our records indicate that you are the trustee for the above repeater system. Enclosed are recordings of violations on the repeater by N8WWM. The transmissions continued for a considerable time and there was no evidence of a control operator.

Since you are the trustee for the repeater, it is important for you to understand that you are responsible for its proper operation. The decision to operate a repeater is a totally voluntarily one. Repeaters are a convenience in the Amateur Radio Service, not a necessity. A repeater is a station just like any other station; and under Section 97.205 of the Commission's rules, all stations must have a licensee and control operator. Under Sections 97.103(a) and 97.105, control operators must ensure the immediate proper operation of a station, regardless of the type of station control. Furthermore, "automatic" control does not mean "unattended" operation. Unattended operation is not authorized under the rules.

The repeater licensee/trustee is responsible for all recurring violations and violations that are not inadvertent, just as a licensee is responsible for a base station HF station operation in the licensee's home. You must prevent recurring and deliberate violations on the repeater by locking rule violators out, using tones, warning users, limiting its operation, or taking whatever steps necessary commensurate with your responsibility as the licensee of the station. If you are unable to do so, then you must shut down your station.

If you are unwilling or unable to prevent violations on the W8RZM repeater, then your operator and station license will be subject to enforcement action by the Commission. Such action may include monetary forfeiture, operator license suspension or station license revocation.

We request that you respond within 20 days of the date of this letter and indicate what action you have taken to prevent additional rule violations on the repeater. Please call me at 717-338-2502 if you have any questions about this inquiry.

Bottom line is that YOU fucd up again, as is typical for you. Read the post again, numbnuts.

It said you can't RECEIVE 20M at night...

No fucknuts, you fucked up again, since we are at the bottom of the solar cycle and even the ARRL says 20 meters isn't open then.

"Flirting with Disaster" if you do.

Fact is, you tried to dig up something that is over 7 years old, when Riley probably hasn't thought about them after the issues were settled. You are pathetic.

Yeah, sure, you just haven't gotten caught yet. Maybe you can work out of banders like Davey Heil and act more pious.

4011. Radio transmissions into metal building

I am a consultant for an AVL (automatic vehicle location system) system used by the Southeastern counties of Michigan. The system is used on winter maintenance vehicles and works on 900 MHz. The vehicles are often stored overnight in metal buildings where it is difficult to obtain transceiver communication from the AVL system. Is there a low cost (possibly passive) way to port 900 MHz radio transmissions into these buildings?

Thanks,

Eric Anderson

When I was a kid, this was the frequency used by all of my toy walkie talkies.

Why would someone put a beacon on channel 14?

I always thought a communications consultant was in knowledge in the field of communications, maybe he needs to work for Mc Donald's.
Lets see, if their last location was just outside of the building before they drove inside lets say they must still be there.

4040. Astatic 631L vs. 636L

I see both these listed by sellers, but only the 631 listed on the Astatic website:
http://www.astaticinstalled.com/products.asp?cat=10

I'm not sure what to make of this. I wonder how the two compare, and which might be the better value for the money.

One seller:
http://www.sjtelecommunications.com/ast-636l.html
carries both and, I think for the same price.

Any thoughts? Thanks.

Also, in terms of seller listings, there are a lot more hits on froogle.com for the 636L vs. the 631L -- for whatever that's worth.

A 636L is a communications mike and a 631L is for paging?
That would mean different response curves. Figure a 636L is good for 300-2500 Hz and a 631L to have more response.

Your radio only responds to the communications curve.
Lots of lows will distort early and lots of highs will splatter.

A bit more reading shows the 636L to have radio connections;
(6 wire cord which allows for relay, electronic or virtually any type hook up), and the 631L to be for paging with balanced output;
(4-conducter, 2-shielded)

You assume that the information that the vehicle had was all transmitted before it went into the building. What if it was not?

This mike is unamplified. I always get reports that my 636L

So, do you think the 636L will work well with a Uniden PC78ELITE ?

Thanks.

P.S. I've also heard good things about the Astatic Red Devil, which is both noise cancelling and powered. Also, apparently, it weighs about half as much as the 636L. I wonder if having a powered (amplified) mic makes a big difference.

Of course, being as clueless as I am, I'm not even sure what the "shaft" is, much less do I know which would be a better size for installing on a 387 Peterbilt. I'm hoping to order one of these tomorrow morning from RadioOutfitter.com, but I don't know which to get:
the 5 or 10" shaft model.

Any hints?

Thanks.

Then there is somthing wrong.
Fix the radio, if its broke then even inside of the building it would not do any good.

That "Shaft" is the section between the antenna mount, and the base of the coil. This portion of the antenna isn't really part of the antenna (i.e. doesn't transmit). Basically what this is for is to extend the antenna up into the air, the object of which is, to get the _coil_ ABOVE the cab of the truck to allow for a proper radiation pattern. The easiest way to decide is to measure the distance from the antenna mount to the top of the cap (straight up into the air, not towards the cab). Choose which ever will get you above, or as close to above, the cabs roof, without overshooting too much. A longer shaft = higher wind drag, so if you can get above with the 5" one, then don't bother with the 10".

Amateur Radio Newsgroups: Total Meltdown
Paul W. Schleck (K3FU) on April 26, 2006
View comments about this article!

Way back in 1972, before there was a World-Wide Web, even before there was Usenet News, amateur radio enthusiasts on the then-ARPANet organized a mailing list known as Info-Hams. In 1979, a couple of researchers at Duke and UNC developed a system that used "Unix to Unix File Copy" or "uucp" to copy files from one system to another, to make a broadcast bulletin-board system called "Usenet." The Info-Hams mailing list eventually gatewayed to this system, becoming fa.info-hams (fa = "From ARPANet"), then rec.ham-radio, then rec.radio.amateur.*.

Fast-forward to the present, and the newsgroups rec.radio.amateur.misc and rec.radio.amateur.policy are now in complete meltdown (the *.antenna, *.dx, *.equipment, and *.space newsgroups still seem to be in good shape, though). Both forums are almost completely bereft of any topic discussion. Instead, one can find run-on threads consisting of short, sniping, and personal attacks containing obscene language from what must be fewer than a dozen, mostly anonymous, users.

What happened? -- Maybe too many run-on arguments about code, or attacks on individual ham's personal character. Maybe just the anarchy and Tragedy of the Commons that is encouraged by totally-open, unmoderated forums where no one is obliged to obey any rules, and no competent authority seems able or willing to enforce them if there were any. Further fanning the flames are free, and anonymous, news posting sites like Google Groups, Yahoo, etc., as well as any news site that simply doesn't care to enforce any net etiquette among its users. Some hams have even offered the explanation that better enforcement of amateur radio regulations by Riley Hollingsworth at the FCC has had the unintended consequence of driving problem hams off the bands and onto a less restrictive forum to wreck.

As for Google Groups, it certainly deserves credit for archiving most newsgroup discussions since 1981 (thanks to old backup tapes meticulously maintained by Henry Spencer at the University of Toronto), but also a big raspberry for contributing to this problem.

This hasn't happened to every newsgroup. Even though other newsgroups have trolls, there seems to be a "immune system" of constructive users who step in both to ostracize problem users, and continue positive contributions in the face of such troublemakers. Certainly this behavior is not tolerated on web logs such as qrz.com and eHam.net. The site owners simply would not allow it. There is at least one example of a licensed radio amateur who is Dr. Jekyll on the blogs, but Mr. Hyde on rec.radio.amateur.policy. There may even be others.

I'm sure some would argue that Usenet is obsolete, and we are all better off going to moderated blogs. Still, I can't help but think that something is being lost here. For example, 20 years into the future, will we be able to read archived and indexed articles from most web logs that exist today, as we now have with Google Groups? Are there constructive solutions to the meltdown on rec.radio.amateur.*, such as converting newsgroups to moderated status, even if such moderated status is simply a self-approval, or anonymous user filter, mechanism?

If I might answer your question, what did we lose: what you lose on the moderated web blogs is annonymity. Yes, you can have annonymity more or less, but somebody somewhere has to approve your posting and your password, and they have your email, it is a bit more of a digital paper chain than on usenet.

You also lose the ability to go off topic. Some fora are more strict in this regards than others, but there it is: sometimes relating one issue to something seemingly off-topic is lost, with it, the freedom to address big picture questions.

You lose the ability to cross post.

Etc... there are many others

So you can't defend your position that Roger, with no antennas, and being in a "rf hole" could interfere with people, your logic, much like you, makes no sense. But your lies never let the truth get in the Well, They are not too expensive on ebay, so you can get both eventually, and then switch them anytime.

Why does it bother you, after all, you outed your wife's perverted sex proclivities as well as your own for having sex with underaged boys. I notice you didn't deny using k4yz's call as if it was your own.

But, you claim he has no antenna or signal, Marqueer. You (and others) have made that very statement. Right here on this newsgroup. Now, you are just backpedaling and lying to get out of what you claimed before when you are called on it.

The fact that I have heard VE7KFM from the west coast of Canada (according to him) carrying on conversations at midnight and later on 20M with W8 stations is meaningless to Roger, who has gotten himself in too deep to admit he was wrong.
In fact I have worked a station in Hawaii on 14.244 at three a.m. and a station in Sofia, Bulgaria at 11 p.m. and dozens of late night foreign stations on 17M.
But of course if Roger can't hear it, it doesn't exist. That is his story, and he's sticking to it.

Hello Jay

Cool breeze with the Aleutian Islands sounding like locals, you may even pick up on the lingo eventually.. lowered willing.

That motor-boat noise in the background might be some kinda' warning. I dunno.

dig the kredentials, btw.

Hey B&C how much to do you charge to train shitheads. There is a few in moderated rec.ponds in need of trainng and housebreaking. What will it cost..Any discount for multiple subjects? Work me up a price and I'll round up all those inbreds.

You've yet to answer any questions. Like why did you out your wife and her sexual practices here! Or your own for that matter? And how do you answer a "woger"? Oh, I know, you would answer it like Linda Lovelace would.

"one useless man is Marqueer, 2 becomes Marqueer and shemale "wife", 3 or more becomes Marqueer's wet dream"
